Soviet Intensifies Pressure on Estonia as Sub Sinks Russian Ship; Germans Claim Warsaw

Still Fighting, Besieged Polish Capital's Radio Tells the World

By Alvin J. Steinkopf,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Sept. 27.—Besieged Warsaw, reported laid waste by bomb, shell and fire, surrendered unconditionally tonight, the Nazi high command announced.

The German communique reporting capitulation of the Polish capital after 20 days of siege shared attention tonight with the expectation in informed quarters that a far-reaching German-Russian accord would result from the flying visit of Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop to Moscow.

Warsaw probably will be handed over to the besieging Nazi army September 29, the high command said, and Gen. Johannes von Blaskowitz has been ordered to arrange the terms of surrender.

(The Warsaw radio, which almost throughout the siege had been on the air with exhortations to Warsaw's citizens and soldiers to resist the invaders, was heard in Budapest as late as 2:45 p. m. today—8:45 a. m., E. S. T. It's announcer insisted the city still held out and would resist to the last.)

Ends Polish War

The surrender, in the German view, marked the end of the short but furiously fought war which started 27 days ago today.

The German high command, after the first brief announcement, issued a second communique as follows:

"Warsaw has capitulated unconditionally. Formal surrender of the city to the German army command will take place September 29 (Friday).

"It is established that the military garrison (Polish) occupying the city exceeds 100,000 men."

Other terms of the surrender were not made known immediately, but it was indicated the Germans had insisted upon elaborate guarantees "to protect the civilian population."

It was regarded likely, too, the Germans had exacted effective guarantees to prevent attacks by the civilian population upon the occupying force, and had a military government ready to enforce such measures, to remove prisoners, relieve distress and stamp out any incipient epidemics.

Reports reaching the German side indicated conditions approaching civil war prevailed in Warsaw during the final stages of the siege with a considerable faction within the city demanding submission to the German terms.

100,000 Men in Garrison

It was believed these terms included surrender of the Warsaw garrison of more than 100,000 men as prisoners of war.

Germans have contended it was their objective to smash the Polish army so there would be no chance of a surviving part reorganizing opposition to German or Russian forces of occupation.

Twenty days ago the first German motorized troops reached Warsaw and penetrated into the suburbs. But they withdrew under heavy Polish artillery fire and at a safe distance awaited the full force of the German army which soon closed in from three directions and then cut off all retreat.

By September 13 the Germans were beginning the squeeze which throttled Warsaw.

During most of this time Warsaw was under the heavy guns of German artillery and the bombs of the big German air force.

Germans contended they restrained their impatience for the city's fall, however, hoping for a surrender which would not subject the city to bombardment.

Two days ago the Germans resumed their assaults on military objectives within the capital area and

Flier Escapes, Tells Of Warsaw's Horrors

Capital a Column of Smoke by Day and A Pillar of Fire by Night, Polish Airman Reports; Guns Boom Its Requiem

By Elmer W. Peterson.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Budapest, Sept. 27.—A Polish army flier who took off from a bomb-pitted field in the heart of Warsaw and escaped through a barrage of German shells, told a grim story today of tragic scenes in the besieged Polish capital.

He was Lieut. Col. Mateus Izycki, one of seven pilots who attempted to fly out of Warsaw at dawn last Monday. The makeshift plane he piloted made a safe landing somewhere in Hungary and today he made his way to Budapest. What became of his fellow airmen, he doesn't know.

PETERSON

The stocky officer, his blue eyes rimmed with lines of fatigue, told of civilians creeping from cellars between air raids and artillery bombardments to bury the dead in parks and public squares.

There was no time for religious services at the hurried burials, which, he said, were held against a backdrop of incessant rumbling from besieging guns.

The colonel related that a thick black pall, which never lifts, hangs over the city, growing blacker each day with new fires added to the flames of Warsaw.

In a voice which at times sank to a whisper, he said:

"Warsaw cannot last forever—but will for a while. When Polish honor has been satisfied, and only then, will surrender be considered. Warsaw's citizens refuse to give up."

(A German communique in Berlin today said the Polish capital had surrendered "unconditionally.")

"From the air the city is a horrible sight," he related. Hardly a

Legion Refuses To Take Sides On Neutrality

Wants Congress to Stay In Session, Larger Army and Navy

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 27.—The American Legion today demanded a well armed neutrality—but declined to take sides in the Congressional struggle over the arms embargo.

Delegates to the twenty-first national convention adopted a resolution insisting that Congress continue in session during "the present grave crisis," that "appropriate action be taken to preserve the peace, sovereignty and dignity" of the United States, and that "our armed forces be expanded immediately to maintain our neutrality."

No stand was taken on the Roosevelt Administration's proposal to lift the ban on shipments of implements of war to belligerent nations. The only explanation offered was this sentence:

"In the present world crisis, conditions may change so rapidly that a pronouncement by the American Legion at this time on specific legislation may be wholly inadequate in the near future."

With an expression of "full confidence in the President and the Congress," it called for steps to safeguard the nation's peace but left to the Senators and Representatives the job of determining how this could best be brought about.

The report of the legion's foreign relations committee on the subject was adopted by a voice vote with only one discernible dissenting vote and no debate on its contents.

However, Leonard Olson, of Chicago, suggested that action be de-

Hid 7 Years Of Exile in U.S., Bergdoll Says

Safe in Philadelphia, He Tells Army Court At Desertion Trial

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 27.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll calmly informed a general court martial today that during 7 of the 19 years he was supposedly a fugitive in German, he actually was living in his mother's home in Philadelphia.

Moreover, the World War's "No. 1 draft dodger" swore he had recovered the $105,000 in gold which he told Army authorities in 1920 he had buried in a Maryland hillside. Actually, Bergdoll testified, the money was hidden in a closet in his mother's home.

Mrs. Emma Bergdoll, his aged mother, corroborated his testimony at his trial for desertion and escape, and added, under the questioning of the civilian defense counsel, Harry Weinberger, that she had invested much of the money, perhaps $90,000, in Liberty bonds.

Held in Philadelphia

His pretty blond German-born wife, Berta, also corroborated her husband's testimony.

Bergdoll, now grown plump and middle-aged, said he visited the United States twice in the period of his self-imposed exile, staying four years the first time and three years the second, but never venturing from the Bergdoll "castle" in Wynnefield avenue, Philadelphia.

As artfully as he dodged the military authorities, he dodged the immigration laws, he disclosed. The first time he came home was in 1929, Bergdoll said. He traveled on a passport issued to J. Amman, a German

Fake Talent Scout Gets Death For Slaying Florida Schoolgirl

By the Associated Press

West Palm Beach, Fla., Sept. 27.—Charles Jefferson, bogus talent scout who confessed slaying a 17-year-old movie-struck schoolgirl, was convicted tonight of first degree murder without a recommendation of mercy. The death sentence is mandatory.

The jury, which had heard Jefferson admit killing pretty Frances Dunn, of Miami, with a hammer and a butcher knife, deliberated four hours and five minutes, returning the verdict at 11:10 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Jefferson smiled wanly and thanked his court-appointed counsel. There was no demonstration in the packed courtroom.

The defendant's counsel had said he would appeal to the Supreme Court if Jefferson were sentenced to die.

Ten married men and two bachelors returned the verdict after hearing the defense claim a capital verdict was impossible because premeditation had not been proven.

The 29-year-old prisoner, appearing as the sole defense witness, readily admitted clubbing and stabbing the pretty brunette dramatics student the day after he lured her and Jean Bolton from their Miami homes with promises of a chance in the movies.

But he denied criminal attacks preceded the killing and said he struck only after Miss Dunn and Miss Bolton had quarreled bitterly about aiding him in carrying out a kidnaping hoax for publicity purposes.

The tall defendant also insisted

Pittman Says U. S. Will Repel Vessels Fighting Off Our Coast

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Neither the President nor Congress intends to involve this country in another European war, Chairman Key Pittman, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee told a radio audience last night.

But he warned that this Nation will repel any belligerent which "imposes on us by conducting warfare in our coastal waters." He added: "It's not necessary that we go any further."

Pittman, author of the Administration's stringent cash and carry bill, spoke over a National Broadcasting Co. radio network as his committee prepared to start consideration of the legislation today. He predicted the bill would be favorably reported.

Recent deluge of Congress with mailed and telegraphed protests against arms embargo repeal, Pittman charged, was "based either upon ignorance of the intent of Congress or are the result of vicious organized foreign propaganda."

Now that the Administration's antiwar proposals are embodied in a bill, he said there is no "reasonable excuse for any misunderstanding by any intelligent citizen of the United States or for the continuance of false propaganda."

Embargo Held Uneventual

"This country," he asserted, "cannot remain neutral so long as the (arms) embargo remains on the statute books."

Finally, Pittman warned that if any government were so "foolish as to declare war against us" because of American precautionary measures, "it would not injure us, but it would eventually destroy the government that made such declaration."

"Our strategy would not be to send our soldiers to fight abroad," he declared. "We would conquer through our economic and financial power and through our indomitable Navy."

As Congress prepared for a battle of words pro and con on the issue that may run into weeks, United States shipping interests voiced at the Capitol fears that the Pittman bill's drastic ban on American vessels bearing goods to belligerents would deal a costly blow to the American merchant marine.

Some Change Possible

At least one Administration lieutenant said privately he thought the Senate might well consider some modification in the bill's strict shipping restrictions to permit trade at least with outlying dominions of belligerents, such as Australia. As now drawn, the bill would permit only American shipping to neutrals, or over inland lakes and land routes to Canada. For the rest, belligerents would have to "come and get it" on a title basis, in their own vessels.

For the second successive day, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh appeared at the Capitol, but this time he lunched with Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, a leader of the forces opposing arms embargo repeal.

Only Tuesday he had lunched with six Senators predominantly favoring embargo repeal, some of whom reported the flying colonel "disturbed" over the fact that his recent speech had been interpreted as opposed to repeal.

Borah withheld Lindbergh's views on the neutrality controversy, saying only:

"We talked over the whole subject frankly and fully, covering his observations of European affairs and covering the question of the embargo and legislation on this subject."

Filibuster Plan Denied

He suggested that Lindbergh might make other radio speeches, but offered no clew to his stand on repeal.

When newsmen sought to question the flier as to the import of his speech, he replied only:

"Well, it is still there to read."

Prospects for a lengthy committee fight apparently disappeared yesterday when Senator Borah told reporters he expected the new cash-and-carry bill to be reported to the Senate today. Borah, and his allies of the isolationist bloc, expect to concentrate their fire in extensive debate against embargo repeal provisions when the bill reaches the floor.

Borah is expected to move in committee to restore the ban on

Britain Adopts 37½% Income Tax, 60% Levy on Excess Profits

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Copyright by New York Times.

London, Sept. 27.—The staggering cost of fighting this war was brought home to the British people today by imposition of the highest income tax in history and by new charges of all kinds which may leave their mark on British economy for generations to come.

Even in the darkest days of the World War and in the financial crisis of 1931 there never was anything like the tax program that Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, coolly announced in the House of Commons today.

The income tax was boosted mercilessly to the new record for all time of seven shillings six pence in the pound—a basic rate of 37½ per cent—more than six times what the taxpayer had to bear at the end of 1914.

It May Go Higher

To soften the blow a slightly lower rate of seven shillings or 35 per cent will be charged for the remaining three months of this year, but after the first of January the full rate will be in force and there is no guarantee it won't go higher as the war drags on.

Exemptions were slashed all along the line so that a single man earning the equivalent of $10 a week was brought into the income tax paying class. At the other end of the scale the surtax was raised so steeply that a capitalist earning £100,000 ($400,000) a year must surrender 80 per cent of his entire income to the government.

No Labor cabinet, bent on equalizing the distribution of wealth, would have dared to submit such a budget, but the higher income tax was not the whole story. A universal excess profits tax of 60 per cent was substituted for the existing tax that applied only to armament firms.

Conscription Hinted

Nothing was said today about a capital levy, but Sir John warned that at the end of the war the government might move toward a "conscription of wealth" by tapping unearned war profits such as those produced by an increase in real estate values.

The estate duty was raised by 10 per cent at one stroke to help pay for Great Britain's colossal expenditure of £2,000,000,000 ($8,000,000,000) in a single year.

Finally, a whole series of indirect taxes was imposed on liquor, cigarettes and sugar so that an ordinary packet of 20 cigarettes, for example, will cost the British smoker 1 shilling and 2 pence (24 cents) or just about twice what they cost in the United States.

No Dissent in Commons

One would have imagined that all these unprecedented burdens would have shocked and angered the British taxpayers who have already borne heavy loads so uncomplainingly during the years of rearmament. But there was no dissent from any quarter in Commons today and none but technical criticisms among the public outside.

"If the price of victory be high, it is a price worth paying," Simon told the Commons, "for it is the price of liberty and all that makes life worth living in Europe and for ourselves."

This was exactly the mood in which the British people discovered the terrific cost of defeating Germany.

As Simon unfolded the details of what he called "these fierce increases" the House listened intently but with a strange light-heartedness that never appeared on any previous budget days. Every excuse for laughter was seized upon; it was a new experience for the frigid Simon to produce ripples of merriment with remarks that in other times might have provoked a chuckle or a smile.

Simon's problem today was to find a way of meeting Great Britain's £2,000,000,000 bill for the present financial year with something more than the £942,000,000 ($3,768,000,000) of revenue estimated last April. Wartime measures such as the rationing of gasoline and the inevitable laying up of automobiles will reduce this estimate to £800,000,000 ($3,560,000,000). Simon

London Denies Nazi Planes Damaged Fleet in Attack

Enemy Aircraft Routed, British Say, Hold Sea Power Upheld

By Robert Bunnelle,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Sept. 27.—Britain tonight hailed the admiralty's claim of victory against the first mass attack of German aircraft on British warships—a claim disputed in Berlin—as a satisfactory reply to the question of whether British seapower could withstand war from the air.

(The Berlin communique asserted the Nazi air force "successfully attacked" British capital ships in the North Sea, "destroying" an aircraft carrier and scoring severe hits on a battleship.)

British tacticians called yesterday's German aerial raid on a home fleet squadron in the North Sea "a complete failure." Naval circles promptly boasted there was no fear for Britain's continued mastery of the seas in the face of this new German effort to break it.

Reports on Bremen

The British version was given to Commons by Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty, who also told Commons that the $20,000,000 German liner Bremen, unreported since sailing from New York August 30, was "believed to be in a north Russian port." Earlier the Bremen had been reported to have reached Murmansk, Soviet Arctic port. There have been rumors, too, that the Bremen is in a British port.

Churchill described the sea battle after an inquiry as to the truth of a German communique claiming Nazi aircraft had destroyed a British airplane carrier, scored "several severe hits on one battleship" and escaped unscathed.

Churchill said the home fleet commander, Admiral Sir Charles Forbes, reported that approximately a score of German planes attacked a squadron of British capital ships together with an aircraft carrier, cruisers and destroyers.

"No British ship was hit and no British casualties were incurred," said Churchill. "One German flying boat was shot down and another was reported badly damaged."

German Plane Shot Down

The House cheered vociferously, and then he added that another German plane came down in the North Sea and with her crew of four was picked up by a British destroyer.

(The Germans said all their planes returned safely to their bases.)

Late tonight, the ministry of information reiterated the British version that there had been no damage to British ships. In a statement it said:

"The statement made by the first sea lord is literally and absolutely correct and there is no truth whatever in the German counter statement."

The Berlin "counter statement" said a heavy bomb had struck the British aircraft carrier and two

D. C. Woman Tells of Three Burning to Death on Athenia

Some of the passengers of the S. S. Athenia, torpedoed the day England declared war on Germany, were burned to death before they were able to reach lifeboats, Mrs. Donald McLeod, one of the Washington survivors of the disaster, told the Associated Press in New York last night.

Mrs. McLeod, with her three children, Betty Jean, 17; Dorothy May, 15, and John Charles, reached New York last night aboard the Orizaba, pressed into refugee service. On board were 240 American survivors of the worst—to date—maritime horror of the war involving civilians.

When the Athenia was shaken by the torpedo's crash Mrs. McLeod and her children dashed for the lifeboats, passing three men whose clothing was in flames, she said. Unable to get into the first boat they reached, she said, they ran back to another. In the second dash, they passed three charred bodies on deck, she told the Associated Press. She was unable to learn how the men were burned.

Mrs. McLeod lives at 4544 Conduit road northwest.

Jane Sunderland, 2101 Connecticut avenue northwest, daughter of Maj. Gen. A. H. Sunderland, chief of Coast Artillery, another Washington survivor, was expected to remain in New York for a few days to buy a new wardrobe.

General Sunderland said she lost most of her clothing when the Athenia sank. Another Athenia passenger, Miss Bernice Jansen, sister of Dr. Russell Jansen, 3320 Seventeenth street northwest, also

Von Ribbentrop, Molotoff, Stalin Confer on Plans For Polish Future

By Witt Hancock,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Sept. 27.—The Soviet government tonight announced the sinking of a Russian steamer off the coast of Estonia by an unidentified submarine as diplomatic activity reached new intensity in Moscow with the opening of German-Russian talks.

The announcement that the 4,000-ton freighter Metallist had been torpedoed and that five of her crew of 24 were missing came while the Soviet press sharply attacked Estonia and accused the little Baltic nation of harboring naval bases for foreign powers.

Unofficial reports persisted that the Soviet was making demands for concessions to erect fortifications in Estonian waters in the Gulf of Finland and the Baltic Sea.

The arrival of German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop for the conferences with Soviet officals coincided with the coming of Estonia's Foreign Minister Karl Selter for his second visit here in three days, and with talk among diplomats that a German-Soviet military pact might be in the offing.

Report Strong Demands

The presence also of Turkish Foreign Minister Saracoglu in Moscow heightened the belief in diplomatic quarters that Russia might spring another surprise, following up the historic Russian-German nonaggression pact signed August 23 on a previous visit by Von Ribbentrop.

(In Helsinki, Finland, sources close to Estonian officials said the Baltic state was submitting to Soviet demands for transit rights across Estonia and commercial and naval concessions on the Estonian coast.

(It was announced in Tallinn, capital of Estonia, that Foreign Minister Selter had returned to Moscow, following a hurried trip there last Sunday, "in connection with new Russian proposals." Dispatches received there from Moscow said considerable speculation prevailed in the Russian capital on the possibility that Russia had made strong demands on Estonia for maritime rights.)

Arrives With Forster

Von Ribbentrop held the first conference of his second historic visit to Moscow tonight with Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff in the Kremlin.

A communique issued after the conference said that Josef Stalin, German Ambassador Von Der Schulenburg and Alexander Shkartzeff, Soviet ambassador to Berlin, sat in on the conversations which lasted more than 2 hours.

(After 4:15 a. m. Thursday in Berlin—10:15 p. m. E. S. T.—A communique by DNB, official German news agency, said conversations lasted several hours and would be continued Thursday.)

The conference was devoted to discussion of "questions connected with developments in Poland," the communique said.

The German foreign minister arrived less than five hours earlier, accompanied by Albert Forster, Adolf Hitler's leader in Danzig before the Free City was annexed by Germany.

Diplomats said the possibilities were three-fold: the signing of a

TOM-TOMS ON THE POTOMAC

Suddenly people with short-wave radios have begun to bombard various government officials here with reports of "spies" they have heard on the amateur wave bands.

Harlan Miller

Much of the amateur radio chatter in snatches, sounds like frivolity anyhow. But to some of the listeners it also sounds suspicious.

* * * *

One "ham" conversation that sounded suspicious to several came from an amateur "in a shack in North Hollywood" whose wife "has a girl friend in Port Arthur" and who mentioned a "powerful portable set working from near New Orleans."

This, to imaginative listeners, sounded like spy code. "Girl Friend" might even mean the liner Queen Mary.

An enormous headache it would be to keep all 60,000 American amateur broadcasters under surveillance.

But it is well known in this Capital that during the last war belligerent nations maintained short-wave sets in this country—including one in the suburbs here near Bolling Field—and it's not impossible that some sets are now being misused in a way damaging to our neutrality. The amateurs have a lot of fun, and they do a lot of good, too; and now they are also givng a few nervous diallers the jitters. But with 60,000 patriotic "hams" on the alert, none can get away with very much for very long.

"—can he change umbrellas?"

So far the most extreme disagreement on American neutrality between two Senators is that voiced eloquently by Herring, of Iowa, and Vandenberg, of Michigan. Men of much the same temperament and background (both were born in Michigan) they are poles apart on the arms embargo riddle.

* * * *

Says Herring: "This country can't formulate its foreign policies two years in advance. We must adapt it now to the situation."

Says Vandenberg: "We can't alter our foreign policy while wars are in progress."

To which Senator Herring's natural reaction is: "Who in thunder says we can't?"

* * * *

WAR WITTICISM: The Nazis and Bolsheviks used to be poles apart. Now they are only a few, if any, Poles apart.

* * * *

CRISIS CAVIAR: Capitol Hill hears that Hitler is delaying invasion of Belgium to see what the American Congress does on embargo repeal . . . Some of the "save democracy" idealists here have taken such a firm vow against American participation in the war that their consciences hurt and they now think repeal of the embargo will partly alleviate this shooting pain.

"—purely a spectator sport"

As this column has long maintained, American generals are the most peaceable of men. Their firm antipathy to American involvement in this war is one of the bright spots in the murky sky to the "we can't come to your war" bloc.

They want America impregnable, but they're determined to regard war in Europe from a clinical, or spectator sport, point of view.

* * * *

When I first came to Washington, a fresh-cheeked, starry-eyed yokel from the West, full of cynicism, one of the things I was most cynical about was wealthly men who abandoned fat jobs to work for the Government for pin money.

"Ah, they're after something, all right!" I said to myself.

Well, I was mistaken about most of the $1-a-year- or $5,000-a-year men I've met. They're on the level about it, and as happy as kids or gentlemen farmers or men retired on $200 monthly annuities in the ads.

At last they're getting a kick out of life, and feeling worthwhile. It's a little like taking the vows.

PROPAGANDA FRONT: Even some of the neutral-in-thought listeners are annoyed by Nazi short-wave propaganda coming from Berlin with an Oxford accent . . .

On my short-wave band Paris, Berlin and London are less than one-sixteenth of an inch apart . . .

At 2:30 a. m. Berlin was broadcasting an American gal playing Mozart on the piano; London was competing with some Paul Whiteman movie music.

Then Berlin interrupted to describe how a British freighter crew cheered the captain of the German submarine that torpedoed 'em, and swung into a medley of Russian airs.

London went gruffly into an organ solo.

Soviet Bilks U.S. of Millions, Dies Charges

Funds Used to Maintain Spy and Sabotage System, Committee Told

By John B. Oakes.

The Communist Party, its "front organizations" and the Soviet government together raise $25,000,000 annually in the United States, Chairman Dies of the House Committee on Un-American Activities charged yesterday.

Dies' assertion followed testimony of D. H. Dubrowsky, former Communist and former head of the Soviet Red Cross in America, that the Soviet government makes over $14,000,000 a year out of alleged propaganda schemes and various "rackets" designed to milk residents of this country.

The chairman pointed out that "previous evidence before this committee has shown that the Communist Party raises $2,000,000 annually and 'front organizations' another $10,000,000, making a total of at least $25,000,000."

Used to Maintain Spies

These funds, Dies charged, are used "to maintain a spy and sabotage system in the United States and to spread propaganda for the policies of the Soviet Union."

A succession of alleged rackets was described by Dubrowsky, including a method of capitalizing on the need of Soviet citizens for food and clothing. Using an artificial exchange rate, a licensing system and heavy import duties, the U. S. S. R. makes over $7,000,000 a year in this category alone, siad the witness.

Soviet appropriation of a large share of the claims paid to Russian families of American World War veterans has accounted for another "$300,000 or $400,000" annually, said Dubrowsky, while about $450,000 is collected through American payments on claims for insurance and industrial compensation.

"Rackets" Net Millions

An advertising "racket" run as a subsidiary of Amtorg, the Soviet trading corporation, nets over $1,000,000 a year, said Dubrowsky, while Amkino, the Soviet film corporation makes from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 a year in this country. Bookniga, Soviet book distributors, make about $2,000,000, he stated.

After describing how the GPU, Russian secret service, intruded even into the workings of the Soviet Red Cross in America, Dubrowsky asserted that GPU activities are still going on in the United States. All Communists, including the staff of the Soviet Embassy itself, are subservient to the GPU, the witness said. He added that the information collected by Soviet spies is now "all in the hands of Hitler."

Echoing the opinion expressed before the committee Monday by Gerhart Seger, a fugitive from the Nazis, Dubrowsky said "one of the vital mistakes of democracies" is the failure to suppress subversive groups.

The witness asserted that "the ink had hardly dried" on the Russo-American agreement of 1933 for mutual noninterference when a GPU agent was assigned to his Red Cross office. The agent, one Jacob Sterngluss, "had nothing whatsoever to do with any Red Cross activities, devoting most of his time to GPU activities," said Dubrowsky.

Assigned to Pilfer Mail

One of Sterngluss' assistants was assigned to pilfer mail and to intercept telegrams and cables going to certain persons, said Dubrowsky. The witness said he protested to the counselor of the Russian Embassy, Boris Skvirsky, who declared that he was powerless to interfere with the GPU.

Describing Inreklama, the advertising "racket" run by the Soviet government, Dubrowsky said its agents demand that American firms selling large quantities of goods to Amtorg place "perfectly useless" advertisements in Russian newspapers and journals. The money thus collected, he said, goes to the Russian State Publishing House.

Profit in Food Shortage

Dubrowsky said the Russian government made money out of the food shortage a few years ago by permitting Russians in America to give Soviet agents small sums for the purchase of food for their relatives in Russia. The designated recipients, said Dubrowsky, obtained in goods "50 or 60 per cent" of the value of the American dollars. The Soviet government, he added, really made a 100 per cent profit, as it had taken the food away from the peasants in the first place.

The sequel, he said, is the clothing racket, whereby the U. S. S. R. requires licenses for the export of clothing to individuals in Russia, and designates certain stores where the goods must be bought. The upshot is that an $8 pair of shoes costs the American purchaser $25 to send to Russia, after licensing, import and postage charges are paid, not to mention the "100 per cent profit" taken by the store selling the goods.

Farm Belt Hit Hard by Long Drought

Planting of Winter Wheat Farther Behind Than Ever Before

By the Associated Press

Agriculture Department officials expressed concern yesterday over severe drought conditions which have developed in the heart of the Nation's farm belt and have caused unprecedented delay in seeding the important winter wheat crop.

Likewise, many livestock farmers, confronted with burned pastures and a shortage of feed and water supplies, are being forced to sacrifice meat animals unfattened. Milk supplies in some sections have been curtailed.

N. E. Dodd, director of the Agriculture Adjustment Administration's Western division, reported upon his return from an inspection tour of the great plains, Rocky Mountains and Pacific Northwest that planting of winter wheat was "farther behind than ever known."

A wide area extending from the central Rocky Mountains eastward through the Mississippi Valley is affected by a fours weeks' shortage of moisture. Dodd said conditions were more "acute" than in the autumnal periods preceding the serious droughts of 1934 nad 1936. Aggravating the situation have been unseasonably high temperatures.

The Weather Bureau, in its weekly weather and crop bulletin, said stock water was badly depleted in Ohio, Missouri, Arkansas, Illinois, Kentucky, Montana and Oklahoma. It said that in western Oklahoma the ground water table was reported to be the lowest ever known.

Dodd emphasized, however, that there was no danger of a shortage in wheat. He said that should the 1940 crop be ususually small, present surpluses would make up the deficiency.

Likewise, the Nation has large supplies of livestock feed crops.

Cheap U.S. Money Hurts Nation, Loan League Chief Asserts

HOLC Takes Care of One Borrower At Expense of Five Thrifty People, C. T. Rice Declares at Convention

By the Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 27.—The United States Government is hurting the country by providing "cheap" money, Clarence T. Rice, of Kansas City, president of the United States Building and Loan League, said today, and it's "going to take all the private funds of the Nation to bring about good times."

He told the league at its annual convention that people were becoming "more and more dependent as we tell them how dependent they are."

"To help these people our Federal Government in its beneficent way has placed at their disposal cheap money," he said. "The HOLC (Home Owners Loan Corporation) established a 5 per cent rate as a national figure and took care of one borrower at the expense of five savers.

Improvement Needed

"The five thrifty people had their incomes cut in two as a result of attention given to one borrower . . . in all the cases of which I know, it wasn't the interest rate that was hurting the man who had a loan on his home. It was the fact that he didn't have a job and couldn't pay interest at any rate."

President Roosevelt sent a message to the convention saying:

"Shall America be better housed? That question confronts us as never before. By procrastination we may neglect the issue and thereby answer in the negative. . . . All over, in urban and rural America, our housing should be improved.

"Shall we wait out the continuous, grim process of obsolescence and decay with its toll of blighted structures and blighted lives? . . . I am glad your organization is wrestling with this problem."

Shortage Threatened

Indianapolis, Sept. 27 (AP).—War in Europe threatens this country with a housing shortage more serious than ever before, says Assistant Administrator Jacob Crane, of the United States Housing Authority.

He told Indiana housing officials here last night a wartime boost in interest rates and building costs would slow down and perhaps stop much-needed private residential construction.

Thus, he said, "the Government-aided USHA program for providing houses for low-income families takes on greater urgency."

Navy to Need Expansion to Patrol West

Officials Say Program Of Panama Conference Requires Boats, Men

By John G. Norris.

Formation of any effective neutrality patrol of the Western Hemisphere, such as that proposed by the United States at the Panama Inter-American Conference Tuesday, would require a considerable expansion of the United States fleet, officials here said yesterday.

The sea patrol already set up, embracing only territorial waters of the United States, will require all available ships of the active fleet and the 40 reserve destroyers now being made ready for sea, it was said. Any extension of this patrol to cover parts of South and Central America, officials explained, would necessitate "at least" the use of the remaining 70 ships of the laid-up destroyer fleet and further enlargement of the Navy officer and enlisted strength.

Naval officials said no plans had been made for American participation in such a patrol, and that none would be while it is still in "the proposal stage." Dispatches from Panama said the plan met with general approval.

Cooperation Required

Under the proposal outlined by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, all American nations would cooperate in the establishment of a safety zone for merchant shipping around the Western Hemisphere. A patrol would attempt to prevent searches, seizures, commerce raiding and other belligerent activities. In view of the small size of Latin-American navies, it was clear that most of the work would have to be done by the United States fleet. The plan would require a watch over a sea belt hundreds of miles wide in places.

Military circles see in the Welles proposal the first step by this Government to carry out President Roosevelt's policy of "hemisphere defense" announced some months ago as the new guiding principle in American defense.

War Department spokesmen insisted the strength of the Army was barely sufficient for the protection of continental United States and overseas possessions. While the greatly expanded air force with the Navy would bear the brunt of any defense of Latin America, an expeditionary force would be needed to establish and guard air bases in South America.

Expansion Program Cited

Under the expansion of the Army to 227,000 men, two additional divisions are being created, which officials said yesterday could form such an expeditionary or "base defense" force, without unduly weakening the defenses of continental United States. Through speeding up the shipbuilding program and recommissioning reserve destroyers, the Navy also is in a position to defend the American continent.

Meanwhile, Coast Guard authorities revealed orders had been given local units to seal the radios of all belligerent ships coming into the territorial waters of the United States. Coast Guard and other Government radio stations keep constant watch.

Union War May Tie Up All D. C. Building Today

Each of 2 A. F. L. Groups to Strike if Other's Drivers Work

By Gerald G. Gross

Civil war in the American Federation of Labor building trades threatens to tie up all Washington construction for an indefinite period beginning today as the result of an ultimatum delivered yesterday by the Washington Building Trades Council.

The executive board of the council, with which 27 union construction crafts are affiliated, notified all contractors and subcontractors that, beginning at noon today, all concrete-mixer trucks shall be driven by members of the teamsters' union, and not by members of the engineers' union.

If an engineer-driven concrete truck is permitted to unload, all trades on the job are thereupon ordered to walk out immediately, according to the council's action.

The jurisdictional dispute, directly involving only the two trades, already has cost other union workers, the Federal and District governments and contractors thousands of dollars in the last two weeks in lost wages and time. By delaying completion of the Social Security Board and Federal Office Buildings, the union row is costing the Federal Government a huge sum in rent bills.

Comes as Strikers Go Back

The council's order came on the same day that members of the truck drivers' union theoretically returned to work after their two-week old strike. They were ordered back to their jobs yesterday under terms of an agreement reached Tuesday, providing for submission of their wages and hours demands to an arbitration board.

Few of the drivers were back in their trucks yesterday, however. Many construction jobs were tied up by bad weather and on several others, where pre-mixed concrete was being hauled in engineer-driven trucks, the teamsters refused to work because of the jurisdictional dispute.

All union officials solicited for information and comment yesterday and last night obliged on condition that they not be quoted. Reason is that the engineer-teamster row is a painful, embarrassing sore spot within the A. F. L., which promised last month that there would be no more such jurisdictional disputes within its ranks.

In Danger of Complete Stoppage

Several weeks ago the department named a conciliation committee to pass judgement on the issue, but the group is not scheduled to meet until October 23.

Meanwhile, however, the Federal and District governments, contractors and thousands of union workmen are wondering about progress on the Social Security, Federal Office, National Institute of Health, Bureau of Standards X-Ray, Municipal Court and numerous other buildings, private as well as public.

Other work, already long delayed and now in danger of complete stoppage, includes District paving and sewer construction.

The engineers' union claims to have agreements with 110 contractors and subcontractors for the hauling of pre-mixed concrete. If the employers capitulate to the Building Trades Council ultimatum, the engineers presumably will call out not only their truck-driving members but also their steam shovel operators, pile drivers and other craftsmen.

"The contractors are damned if they do and damned if they don't," a neutral Government official observed.

Death Decreed For Florida Killer

Miss Bolton stood by while he struck down her schoolmate, contradicting the blonde night club singer's testimony that she sat terror-stricken in Jefferson's car while he assaulted and killed Miss Dunn some distance away in a thicket.

Jefferson said after he had driven the girls to a lonely beach road north of Miami early last August, he announced to them they were being kidnaped and Jean suggested such an abduction might prove good Nation-wide publicity for a coming movie career.

But Miss Dunn refused to join in such a hoax, he said, and while she and Jean quarreled bitterly he struck down Frances with a hammer, then got his gun from the car and fired once at her, apparently missing.

"Frances fell back, just sitting, leaning on her hands," he continued. "She started jerking. I'd never seen anybody die before, but I knew she was dying."

He said the jerking continued and he stabbed his victim before she died.

He was asked whether Miss Bolton had anything to do with the killing.

"No. Nothing whatever. She just stood there with her hands over her face.

"She said, 'I'm in terrible trouble.'

"I said, 'No, you aren't. I did it.'"

When asked why he hit his victim, he replied in a bare whisper. "I wish I knew."

Motorman Fined For Clanging Bell

A Washington streetcar motorman yesterday was fined for failing to yield a right of way, and too much activity with his bell. Another, up for excessive bell ringing, was dismissed.

Traffic Policeman L. A. Hartnett brought the cases before Judge Hobart Newman in Traffic Court. He said that on September 16, Motorman Carlson B. Daniels, 26, of the 200 block of Twentieth street southeast, sounded his bell with such alarm at Seventh and F streets that two women pedestrians leaped back into a traffic lane. A $2 fine was imposed on the unnecessary noise charge and a $3 fine for the failure to yield right of way.

Motorman Thomas H. Fitzgerald, 42, of Capitol Heights, Md., was acquitted of unnecessarily ringing his bell at Fourteenth street and New York avenue.

Metal Trades Union Blames Labor's Warfare on Lewis

A. F. L. Affiliate Suggests President's Proposals for Peace Be Addressed Only to C. I. O. in Convention Action

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 27.—American Federation of Labor metal trades unions renewed their bitter criticism of John L. Lewis and the C. I. O. today with suggestion future White House efforts to bring aobut labor peace be directed solely toward the C. I. O. leader.

The unions adopted a report blaming Lewis for defeating efforts to settle the labor split, and asserting that the federation stood ready to negotiate peace, in concluding a three-day convention.

President Roosevelt said recently he would send another message to the A. F. of L. convention here next week, and labor leaders said they expected it to be a plea for labor to get together for national unity.

The convention took no stand on the Wagner act and the National Labor Relations Board, which will be considered by the main A. F. of L. convention starting next week.

Father John W. R. Maguire, Chicago educator, urged the unions to be on guard against the spread of totalitarianism as a cure for economic ills.

He recommended collective bargaining be applied to economic problems with labor sitting at the conference table with investors, owners and managers.

"Those doing the most to hasten communism," he said, "are the short-sighted employers who refuse to recognize organized labor."

The unions instructed their officers today to take action on complaints that Navy Yard commandants were interfering with union activities in the yards.

Jasper Davis, of the boilermakers union, told the metal trades convention that the union might have to make a new fight for recognition.

John P. Frey, head of the metal trades department, criticized orders he said have been issued by Navy Yard commandants barring union business agents from yards. Frey charged "active members of the Communist Party" were permitted to work in the yards.

FCC Withholds Decision on WMCA License

Station Purportedly Used Intercepted Radio War Messages

The Federal Communications Commission yesterday gave officials of Station WMCA, New York, a severe grilling for broadcasting what was purported to be radio messages from German and British authorities to their respective ships at sea on the eve of the outbreak of European hostilities.

After a hearing that assumed many aspects of a police court inquiry the commission withheld its decision as to whether to carry out its threat to revoke the station's license. There were indications that the commission is divided on the question.

At the same time the FCC announced a further suspension of its recently adopted rule restricting the broadcasts of international short wave stations in this country pending a completion of the commission's study of the various radio problems in relation to war conditions.

Donald Flamm, president and sole stockholder of WMCA, and other officials testified that they had obtained the information from the New York Herald Tribune, from which it was buying special service at the time. The newspaper, it was brought out, published the messages the following day.

While the commission had considered bringing the newspaper into the inquiry, the majority felt that the FCC has no authority to control the reception and publication of international radio messages.

Pastor Admits Approving Attempt To Kill Daughter

Camden, N. J., Sept. 27 (AP).—A minister on trial for the slaying of his daughter was quoted in court today as admitting he approved an earlier attempt to kill her because he was afraid her misconduct would cost him his pulpit.

The earlier attack on his 18-year-old daughter, Wanda, the Rev. Walter Dworecki said in a statement read by a court clerk, was made by John Rocco and John Popolo, both material witnesses in the case.

"I took $1,000 insurance in March on Wanda, because I promised to pay the men for that job," Dworecki's statement said.

A month later, the girl was beaten unconscious and left on a roadside. She recovered after weeks in a hospital, only to be strangled to death the night of August 7.

The State charges the minister hired Peter Shewchuk, 21-year-old former carnival employe, to kill her.

Building Program Creates Stray Cat Problem in D. C.

The Animal Protective Association is up to its neck in alley cats, a situation which, odd though it may seem, is largely the result of the Government building program in Washington.

As Miss Virginia W. Sargent, president of the A. P. A., explained yesterday, whenever dwellings are evacuated and razed to make way for a new Federal building many tenants leave their cats behind. She estimated that on the new Social Security Board Building project alone, 150 tabbies and tommies were abandoned.

Miss Sargent wanted it made clear that, although telephone service at the A. P. A. office is temporarily suspended during renovations, the association remains ready to care for every stray cat or dog brought to its attention.

Floyd Gibbons Is Buried Here

Floyd Gibbons, writer and war correspondent, was laid to rest in Mount Olivet Cemetery yesterday after services in the Dahlgren Chapel of his old alma mater, Georgetown University. The Rev. John J. Kehoe, S. J., celebrated the solemn requiem mass in the presence of friends representing the fields of letters, drama, law, finance, medicine, business and diplomacy.

Among those paying tribute to the 52-year-old newspaper writer were the Irish Minister, Robert Brennan, and Mrs. Brennan.

Mr. Gibbons died Sunday at his farm near Stroudsburg, Pa., as he was preparing to leave for the Franco-German front.

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association has co-operated in rounding up enrollment and in finding out the courses needed.

Poison Ring Widow Gets Death for Murder of Husband

Philadelphia, Sept. 27 (AP).—A woman was doomed to death and a man to life imprisonment today in first-degree murder verdicts returned in Philadelphia's murder-for-insurance ring trials.

Mrs. Grace Giovanetti, 45, twice married, was convicted in the poison death of her first husband, Pietro Piorolli. The jury made the death sentence mandatory.

A few hours later, a verdict was returned against Emedio Muscelli, 31-year-old baker, in the death of Guiseppe di Martino. The jury recommended life imprisonment.

Four defendants now have been convicted, three with mandatory death sentences, in connection with the 50 to 100 deaths that investigators have attributed to the ring in several Eastern States in the past ten years. Three others have pleaded guilty, and nearly a score are under arrest.

Pope Reported Urging Peace Parley on Allies

Conference Would Aim At Creation of Polish Buffer State

By Herbert L. Matthews.

Copyright by New York Times.

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 27.—The Pope has been working diplomatically through the neutral states to get England and France to agree to a peace conference that would end with the creation of a Polish buffer state on ethnic lines, it is reported here.

This report has been current since last Friday and is still incapable of confirmation but your correspondent has already received it from three different sources while today an Italian correspondent repeats it from Berlin so it looks as if there is something in it.

The idea is that the Pontiff feels that the great menace to Christian civlizaton comes from Russia and her recent eruption into Central Europe. All states, including Germany, ought to get together to prevent the spread of communism and the atheism which accompanies it, he believes.

At the same time, the Pope feels that anything is better than a continuation of the war, particularly as the worst affects of it are yet to be felt.

Consequently, say these reports, he would be willing to accept, although not to condone, Germany's conquest of Poland if a settlement were arranged that would guarantee Europe a lasting peace and the Polish Catholics a state of their own which protected them from communism and the neo-paganism of Germany.

The diplomatic maneuver involved would be a delicate one since it presupposes the possibility of separating Germany and Russia. Otherwise, the Holy See would be ranged against Germany and Russia combined, which, in effect, would mean that it would be taking sides in the war. This is something which the Pontiff has carefully avoided doing.

It should be noted that this supposed proposal of the Pope's parallels Il Duce's peace move. He has suggested a cessation of hostilities in acceptance of the German conquest and indirectly, the formation of a purely Polish state.

It has not been suggested, however, that Mussolini has been taking advice from the Holy See for the Italian line of policy has been consistent in that regard ever since the war started and even before. Behind that openly declared policy, there has been and still is intense diplomatic activity on the part of the Italian government to bring pressure on England and France which is what the Pope is supposed to be doing.

If Mussolini were really being backed by the Pontiff, it would help to explain the persistent hopes entertained in Rome that the British and French might yield. It also gives a clew to the extent of the pressure to which London and Paris are being subjected.

A stinging attack against Russia is published today in the Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano, which denounces Moscow's latest diplomatic move against Estonia as a pretext for her expansionist policy in the Baltic.

Russia, says the newspaper, has no right to demand explanations from Estonia for the escape of a Polish submarine from Tallinn. What she really wants when she asks that guarantees be given to her against the hypocritical operations of a hostile submarine fleet, in predominance in the Baltic.

Russia Ridiculed

The Osservatore ridicules Russia, which "boasts of having the greatest submarine fleet in the world," for her "anxiety" over the disappearance of the last remaining Polish submarine and goes on to point out that Russia is now pursuing "an anti-Versailles policy."

Abolition of Versailles, it stresses, would mean the end of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, three independent states created at Versailles with territory that belonged to Russia, as well as the incorporation of Bessarabia, another former Russian possession, to the Soviets.

"Estonia is a neutral country," writes the Osservatore, "her neutrality has been officially declared with a presidential decree on September 2, last. Russia, at the moment she began her aggression against Poland, declared her neutrality to all countries represented in Moscow, and therefore . . . Soviet-Estonia relations are between two neutral powers."

". . . Moscow . . . is a doubtful neutral, who has been the first to violate the neutrality laws, and could therefore be defined an 'aggressor neutral,' if this were not a contradiction in terms."

All Quiet in West, Says Reporter

By Louis P. Lochner,

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the German army on the Western Front, Sept. 27.—An air skirmish 10,000 feet above a ghost city—Saarbruecken—in which six German pursuit planes chased after one French plane, the dealing of random shots known to Germans as the "vesper blessing," and artillery fire 5 miles from Zweibruecken to a point 1¼ miles outside the city—these were all that happened on the Western Front so far as I could see today.

Today's journey took me from Trier on the Moselle River past the Reich's first line of defense, then along the Saar River and the Saar Valley to Kaiserlautern in the Palatinate—always following the Siegfried Line.

Germans said that "desultory" shots also had been exchanged in the early morning from the French heights opposite Saarbruecken.

It was certain that neither Saarbruecken nor Zweibruecken were hit by the French during our stay, nor could I detect any signs that these Saar Valley centers had been hit previously.

Numerous German officers and privates with whom I talked, said not a single German pillbox had returned French fire.

The Germans reported that the only fighting, outside of occasional exchanges in the air, that occurs daily, is near Zweibruecken. This the Germans call the "vesper blessing" because of its regularity about 6 p. m.

At that time the sun is at the backs of the French and the German positions are best visible to them. Not much harm is done, however, on either side, the Germans said.

Population Removed

Saarbruecken, an industrial city of 69,000 inhabitants, with valuable steel and iron works, is dead.

The population has moved out completely. Signs on many shops read "evacuation of this business has been completed."

Yet the French, so far as I could observe today, make no effort either to seize it—which might cost considerable loss of life because of strong German fortifications surrounding it—or to shell it directly.

With our military escorts, I entered the dead city with two other American newsmen in full view of the French. It appeared that had they desired, the French easily could have picked us for easy marks.

The German officers accompanying us made no effort to conceal their uniforms indicating their rank.

Nothing happened.

We were able to press forward to a street only one mile away from the French line.

The Saarbruecken industrial plants have carted away their valuable machinery as well as steel and ore reserves.

200 Carloads Daily

Our German guide told us 200 freight cars were moving daily from Saarbruecken with materials and machinery of all sorts without the slightest interference by the French. We also saw big trucks loaded to the top leaving across a bridge which the French easily might have destroyed.

We also saw dozens of families arriving with vehicles of every description and taking from their homes such valuables as they failed to grab when the hurried orders to move out first came.

Similarly Zweibruecken was a dead city. Its industrial plants lay idle.

Soldiers here and there and families calling for their belongings were the only evidences of life. Outside the city on heights commanding a good view of French positions five miles away, German artillery in a desultory way was firing back when the French began shooting about 6 p. m.

"We must let them know we are still here," was the dry comment of one officer with us.

Not all the villages and cities of the Saar Valley were depopulated. Occasionally we passed through some where life seemed perfectly normal except that more soldiers than ordinarily were quartered in homes.

It was explained to us the population was moved out of only those cities which lie in a direct line of French artillery.

It appeared that nothing could shake the belief of the army and air force, as well as the local population, that the French never can get beyond this fortification.

The only exceptions I was told are two strips of German land, one in the Warndt Forest projecting into French territory, the other a narrow "finger" pointing into France south of Saarbruecken.

These are a sort of no-man's-land, abandoned by Germany, I was told, for strategic reasons. The French hold these as in pincers, the Germans explained; therefore they would have been difficult to defend.

Bergdoll Says He Hid 7 Years in U.S.

hotel porter; the second time under the name of John Sparks.

Weinberger put Bergdoll on the stand to combat the Army's contention that the statute of limitations was still in force, since the time spent out of the jurisdiction of the Army doesn't count. The statute of limitations, Weinberger said, was two years.

Before Bergdoll testified, the Army prosecutor, Maj. Archer Lerch, called Eugene Stecher, former Bergdoll family chauffeur, who fled with Bergdoll to Germany and remained there five years, and Technical Sergeant Frank Zimmer, who identified Bergdoll as the man he tried to arrest in Eberbach, Germany, in 1921.

The Government hoped in this way to establish a prima facie case of Bergdoll's long residence in Germany, and even produced a passport application made on October 1, 1934, in which he swore he had lived in Germany since 1920.

Weinberger's move, therefore was something of a surprise.

Bergdoll, dressed in the dark-brown uniform of a general military prisoner, watched the proceedings with apparent indifference. The air in the makeshift courtroom in the gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. on Governors Island was chilly, the spectators few.

From this same island he had set out under guard on May 20, 1920, following his conviction as a draft evader, to recover the "pot of gold" he insisted he had buried in western Maryland. He escaped during the trip.

A little over 19 years later he was back to face the 13 officers who had placed their sabers and caps on the long table behind which they sat.

He is serving five years as a draft evader, since his return from Germany and voluntary surrender last May, and he may get five years more on conviction of escape and desertion.

Paris Expects Peace Offer By Hitler

Believes He'll Extend Olive Branch in Mailed Fist This Week

By Taylor Henry,
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Sept. 27.—Adolf Hitler was reported tonight to be speeding concentration of his troops on the Western Front to be used as a club to induce France and Britain to discuss peace terms.

Advices reaching Paris from Germany through neutral countries indicated the Fuehrer was preparing to make a formal offer of peace based on the status quo resulting from the partition of Poland between Germany and Soviet Russia.

Both France and Britain are officially and repeatedly on record with the declaration that there will be no peace until the Hitler regime has been destroyed and Poland's independence restored.

Most military as well as diplomatic signs, however, pointed to the possibility of a German peace offer—perhaps before the end of this week.

It is for this reason that Hitler was believed to have sent his foreign minister, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, to Moscow today ostensibly to put the finishing touches on the partition of Poland.

Actually Von Ribbentrop was reported in Paris to be trying to persuade Josef Stalin to sign or at least give the impression that he is willing to sign a military alliance which Germany could use as a threat against the French and British unless they were willing to call off the war on his terms.

It was for the same reason that Hitler was believed to have issued urgent orders to his high command to clean up Poland quickly so there would be no semblance of resistance left there to which France and Britain could point.

Trains were said to be moving in a steady stream across Germany, pouring more and more troops into the Siegfried fortifications. Squadron after squadron of warplanes were reported shifted to the west.

Content With Hampering French

Military advices indicated these transfers of men, guns and planes now virtually had been completed under Hitler's continuous demands for speed.

It was equally obvious the Germans on the Western Front had made no real use of the forces concentrated there.

The reason for this was considered to be that the Germans did not want large-scale operations to start against France and Britain for fear of endangering any chances for peace.

Until now the Nazis have appeared content to take the usual measures to defend their fortress line and hamper the French advance into German territory as much as possible without joining a battle which would be difficult to break off.

Operations on the Western Front tonight provided an illustration of this apparent German strategy.

German artillery was concentrating its fire on the four main salients which the French have driven into Nazi territory.

At the same time, the German tactics appeared to be to try to keep the French high command constantly aware of the immense German forces being held in leash as well as the ever-present possibility that they might be turned loose in a major offensive.

Constant German feeler attacks harried French advance positions as the Nazi artillery fire increased against the four salients, which dot the northern flank of the Western Front at almost equal intervals.

The heaviest fire from the German guns battered the area behind the Lauter River, across which the French hold a wedged salient in Bienwald Forest. This is just north of the point where the Western Front hinges and the northern flank starts.

The Germans used long-range field pieces to hurl big shells across the river into deserted towns as deep as 4 miles back in French territory.

Nazi shells ripped holes in the strategic French highway from Hagenau northwest to Wissembourg on the western edges of the Bienwald.

Artillery Duel

The Hornbach salient which the French have pointed at the important German town of Zwiebruecken was under unrelenting artillery fire. On both flanks of this sector, which lies 25 to 30 miles northwest of Wissembourg, German raiding parties conducted light operations apparently to remind the French that salients could be pinched off.

Except for intermittent shelling, the Saarbruecken sector, where the French salient lies east of the city, remained quiet. The peak of this wedge is some 15 miles west of Hornbach.

A heavier artillery duel was resumed 25 miles farther west where the French lines bend almost to the banks of the Saar River between the German cities of Merzig and Saarlouis.

A French general staff communique on today's operations said merely that "the day was marked by the activity of our reconnaissance detachments."

The first nip of cold weather hit the Western Front today. Paris hospitals and relief organizations received urgent calls for doctors, ambulances and warm clothing to be distributed to civilians still in the zone just behind the front.

A unit from the American Hospital in Paris started for the northern tip of the frontier during the afternoon after making the rounds of American homes in the city collecting clothes and supplies.

Rumania Tells Col. Beck He Can't Move Despite Row

Bucharest, Sept. 27 (INS).—Members of the Polish government interned in Rumania must remain in their present quarters, the Rumanian government ruled today in refusing to grant Polish Foreign Minister Beck permission to change his residence.

Beck, who has been staying with other members of the Polish cabinet in the resort town of Flanic, said he wished to leave because of a quarrel with Gen. Felicijan Slawoj-Skladkowski, Polish premier. But the Rumanian government declared that such reasons were not acceptable.

The Rumanian government will not permit communication between Polish officials who are located in three places, President Moscicki at Becaj, Marshall Smigly-Rydz at Cralova and the cabinet members at Flanic, it was announced. The foreign office statement added that none will be permitted to leave Rumania.

ferred because he understood the resolutions committee would offer a resolution on neutrality tomorrow.

National Commander Stephen F. Chadwick ruled that neutrality was in the jurisdiction of the foreign relations committee and any similar report by the resolutions group would be ruled out of order.

The legion placed its 1,026,084 members behind moves to build the American Army and Navy to such size that they could turn back any invasion.

Demanded specifically in a report of the national defense committee that evoked applause and unanimous approval were:

"Immediate" steps by Congress to provide a supply of raw and manufactured materials so large that a naval and military force of at least 1,000,000 men could be sustained and equipped for a year.

A Navy "second to none" and formidable enough to defend American interests in both the Atlantic and Pacific "against any possible groupings of aggressors."

An immediate increase of the Regular Army to 280,000 men and the National Guard to 426,000 men—the peace time limits—and then removal of these limitations so they could "properly and promptly" meet "the changing situation."

Provision of funds for modern equipment for both units and appropriations for training them in the field.

Development of the Reserve Officers Training Corps and the Citizens Military Training Camps and a "modified program of voluntary military training" for the Civilian Conservation Corps under the direction of the War Department.

Nazi Air Raid on Fleet Failed, London Says

lighter bombs had struck the battleship.

The German attack on the British fleet was the second major engagement of the war between sea and air forces. On September 5 Britain reported a flight of its planes raided German warships at Kiel, inflicting heavy damage by dive-bombing. The British confessed to casualties during the raid. Some of their fliers were taken prisoner.

British accounts of the latest attack, 150 miles off the Norwegian coast, attributed the failure of the Germans to score hits to their reluctance to dive low in the face of British anti-aircraft fire.

Naval men here asserted it is extremely difficult for aircraft to score direct hits on ships at sea. They said squadrons could easily carry out zigzag maneuvers and bring into play anti-aircraft guns of such caliber as to make low flying attacks "suicidal."

The minister of information announced that 255,000 tons of contraband, chiefly iron ore and petroleum products, had been seized since the beginning of the war, including more than 70,000 tons taken during the week ended yesterday.

Berlin Reports Success

Berlin, Sept. 27 (AP).—The German high command declared today that the Nazi air force had "successfully attacked" several British warships in the North Sea.

The command's communique said of the airplane-naval encounter yesterday "in the middle part of the North Sea:"

"Besides one airplane carrier which has been destroyed, several severe hits were scored on one battleship. Our airplanes sustained no losses."

In Berlin this was interpreted to mean that a second British aircraft carrier—the Courageous, sunk September 17, being the first—had been destroyed. But the communique did not name the British vessel.

"Battleships, airplane carrier, cruisers, destroyers" were in the British unit attacked, the communique asserted.

Denies Mark Missed

The high command later denied British assertions that the German raiders had missed their mark in attacking the British warships and that three German planes were disabled.

The air force command said one 500-kilogram (1,102-pound) bomb, among others, had struck a British aircraft carrier squarely and that two 250-kilogram bombs had hit a battleship near her prow and amidships.

"The effect of those heavy bombs requires no further explanation," the command said, adding the assertion that all German planes returned to their bases after the attack."

Through diplomatic channels Germany received a protest against the shooting down of a Dutch civil airliner. Spokesmen said the incident was regretted deeply but pointed out a swift plane near the vital Helgoland naval base quite properly aroused the suspicions of the German air force.

Kiel Raids Denied

Another series of denials came from government offices, including denunciation of reports of destructive enemy air raids at Kiel and Friedrichshafen.

It was stated here that England started the war with only seven plane carriers and now British aviation was crippled seriously by the loss of two.

Contraband Lists Assailed By Uruguay

Americas Urged To Defy Ban on Civil Articles

By the Associated Press

Panama City, Sept. 27.—A proposal to eliminate from contraband lists all articles destined for the civil populations of warring nations was submitted to the Inter-American Neutrality Conference today by the delegation from Uruguay.

The proposal, which got immediate widespread attention and was expected to become one of the more controversial issues of the conference, called for a joint declaration along the following line:

"That it is inadmissable that war contraband lists include, either conditionally or absolutely, products or articles destined for the alimentation and subsistence of civil populations, and raw materials and machinery used for peaceful industry."

The Uruguayan delegate who presented the proposal, Pedro Manini Rios, said complications of the European war affected commerce and communications of all nations having no part in the conflict, and charged that the contraband lists were one of the principle obstacles.

Silver Question Raised

He said many items on these lists apparently were not for war uses but on the contrary are indispensable for the subsistence of populations and the normal developments of pacific activities, such as foodstuffs and wearing apparel and raw materials and machinery not dedicated to the manufacture of instruments of war."

The question of the United States' silver-purchase policy was raised when the delegation of Mexico, which has benefited from that policy in the past, announced it would submit to the conference's sub-committee on American economic cooperation a plan for stabilization of the silver market.

Foreign Minister Eduardo Hay, of Mexico, said he would ask for a clarifying declaration on the United States' silver policy, which he said "benefits the economy of several American countries." Such a declaration, he indicated, would be a factor for stabilization.

The delegates arranged to push their deliberations in an effort to conclude the conference Saturday night or Sunday.

Other resolutions offered today provide for:

Creation of a commission of experts from all American governments to stimulate immediate construction of the Pan-American highway (by Mexico).

The use of silver as an instrument of international payments (by Mexico).

Checking increases in freight rates and insurance rates (by Peru).

Tariff Truce Sought

An inter-American tariff truce to increase trade, and cooperation of American merchant lines to provide transportation for increased cargoes among American ports (by Brazil).

An "inter-American financial institute" to coordinate activities of all central banks of the American republics (by Mexico).

The proposal for a patrol of American waters, in which the United States Navy presumably would play the chief role, was the main subject before the neutrality subcommittee.

Argentina, Uruguay and Brazil, which already have their own agreement to guard the eastern coast of South America, were expected to lend support to the plan.

Canal Zone residents and citizens of the Republic of Panama, keenly aware of the importance of the canal, pointed out that the suggested United States patrol zone encloses the entire Caribbean Sea and both Atlantic and Pacific approaches to the canal.

Smoke of Flaming Warsaw Shrouds Her Heroic Dead, Escaped Polish Flier Reports

"The city is ringed by six divisions of German soldiers whose artillery is pouring in shells unceasingly, aided by an average of 200 raiding planes a day.

"Warsaw is a city where from 40 to 60 new fires start daily from incendiary bombs. Only small fires can be handled; the big ones are left to burn

"It is a city where priests say mass in wrecked churches; a city of never-ending bedlam where heavy bombs go crashing through four or five floors and topple an entire building.

"There's a no-man's-land strewn with dead men, women and horses. Across this area, except where the Germans have reached outlying houses, our own artillery replies from behind barricades of overturned street cars, sandbags, buildings, stones and captured German tanks.

Food Getting Scarce

"Our troops and ammunition are sufficient for some time but food is getting scarce. There's some life in the streets, for the city must live, but old people and children never leave their cellar refuges.

"No gas has been used throughout the siege, except for occasioonal tear gas charges against our artillery.

"We captured a number of German tanks by the simple expedient of using hand grenades tied to bottles of gasoline. At times there has been bitter fighting at close range."

Col. Izycki said the only time the Warsaw defenders had any rest was "when the Germans took time out for lunch.

"Otherwise," he continued, "the shelling has been steady and methodical, striking every section of the city.

"I had a room in the Bristol Hotel. One day I went there only to find my room had disappeared in a mass of ruins.

All Hospitals Destroyed

"There are freakish touches about it all. Ironically enough, the war ministry was one of the few buildings untouched when I left.

"The Germans captured our broadcasting aerials outside the city, but we kept using them from our downtown studios two days before they caught on.

"All hospitals have been hit or destroyed and practically all medical aid is administered on the spot. In many instances there was nothing to do but watch those die who were seriously wounded.

"At times the wounded had to be thrown from burning houses to the street below, even though they suffered additional broken bones.

"On some captured German prisoners we found pamphlets promising them that by Christmas Nazi Propaganda Minister Goebbels would speak to them from London."

The officer explained that the desperate dash of himself and his companions was to save the seven planes all that they had left in Warsaw.

Tells of Desperate Dash

He said his own plane was one which was used for instruction in the aviation school and had to be reassembled under the continual threat of German machine guns.

The other six planes, he added, were hidden between houses near the airfield.

"One by one these planes swooped out from their hiding places, took a brief run and climbed into the air. I was the last to leave while Polish soldiers were attacking the Germans furiously to distract their attention.

"Tracer bullets whined all around me. I went to 9,000 feet with my machine guns ready and only enough gasoline for an hour and a half of flying.

"I glided long distances to save fuel. I had no maps and only knew that I was in Hungary when I came down low and saw the peasant costumes."

Diplomats Try To Avert War In the Balkans

Southeastern Europe Awaits Outcome of Russo-Turkish Talks

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Sept. 27.—Spurred by fear that hostilities will spread into southeastern Europe and set off a free-for-all Balkan conflict, diplomats worked tonight to stamp out all possible war sparks.

The Balkans apprehensively awaited the outcome of negotiations in Moscow between Turkish Foreign Minister Sarocoglu and Soviet Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff.

The governments hoped for Russia and Italian guarantees of the Balkan status quo with the possible formation of a strong neutral Balkan bloc under the aegis of Russia and Italy.

Diplomats here believe the success or failure of such efforts hinges on the extent to which each nation considers the situation changed since the invasion of Poland, and their willingness to make mutual concessions toward a general peace objective.

A previous, Soviet-inspired effort to organize a somewhat similar Balkan confederation last May failed, chiefly because some nations refused to participate under the terms then proposed.

It was understood Bulgaria then declined to enter a pact unless she was guaranteed her old boundaries, including Dobroja, now part of Rumania, and an outlet to the Aegean Sea through Greece.

Greece, in addition to her apprehension concerning the expanding Soviet influence, refused to make any territorial concessions.

Diplomats consider the vital question now whether Bulgaria, Yugoslavia and others, in view of the greatly changed situation, are prepared to recede from their previous stands.

Some observers believe Yugoslavia may now be more co-operative since the proposed union would be formed under the egis of Italy as well as he Soviet Union, while Bulgaria may be induced to reduce her claims for rectification of the border.

The Rumanian government was facing serious internal problems in preparing to form a new cabinet to replace the emergency military triumvirate which assumed control after the assassination September 21 of Premier Calinescu.

The new government, which may be formed over the week-end, was expected to take measures to maintain Rumania's neutrality and protect her borders.

Shells Shake Warsaw Radio As Pole Says, 'We Fight On'

'Last Hospital Destroyed . . . Dead and Wounded in Streets . . . City Being Ruined So We'll Have Nothing to Defend or Live For'

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Sept. 27.—Hymns were substituted for stirring military marches today as the Warsaw radio came back to life to tell with dramatic pauses the Polish story of the lingering hours of the German siege.

(An official Berlin announcement said at 8:17 (2:17 p. m., E. S. T.) that the city had surrendered unconditionally and probably would be occupied September 29.)

The station—silent since early Monday morning—returned suddenly to the air at 2:15 p. m. (8:15 a. m., E. S. T.) to describe the "destroyed inferno" as bombs, shells and fire tore and burned the once beautiful city into ruins. The broadcast lasted 30 minutes.

The announcer told a story of the deaths of more than 3,000 civilians today, the failure of the city water supply and fear of plague—and still of the resistance of the Polish troops on the twentieth day of the siege.

At that moment, he said, German bombing planes were throwing incendiary bombs into the center of the city.

Because the Germans could not capture the city, asserted the announcer, "they are systematically ruining it, one district after another, so the Polish soldier will have nothing more to defend, no reason for wanting to live."

He said the Modlin forts, 18 miles northwest of the capital, still were holding out and just then a dull booming came over the microphone.

The speaker paused as if he, too, heard the artillery, then said, "Our troops are defending us and they will continue to protect us."

Dull roars shook the microphone near the finish and the speaker stammered from time to time.

It seemed as if the studio was being shaken violently.

The announcer pleaded for aid from Poland's allies and declared the morale of defenders and civilians was excellent.

This is how the announcer described the situation in Warsaw:

"Food situation is tragic . . . Our last hospital was destroyed by German shells today . . . Dead and wounded are lying in the streets because transportation and communication facilities have broken down . . . Fires rage unchecked . . . Destruction of the Hospital of the Child Jesus shortly before noon caused the deaths of 17 nuns and three physicians . . . Polish anti-aircraft guns brought down eight raiding planes yesterday . . . About 500 fires are burning . . . About all that is left to burn is blazing . . . All public buildings are either afire or already badly damaged . . . Polish troops are holding out against savage and desperate Nazi attacks. In some places they have bettered their positions with bayonet charges . . . We expect aid from our allies . . . The city is razed but we live on."

Lloyd George Flays Polish Government

Accuses Leaders of Deserting 'Brave Soldiers' and Peasants

Copyright by New York Times.

London, Sept. 27.—As Warsaw fell in flames to the Germans, for the second time in 24 years, Lloyd George, the war-time premier, who helped fashion Poland at Versailles, launched a violent onslaught on the "improvident Polish government" for having deserted its "brave soldiers" and "poverty-stricken peasants."

This attack, coupled with an assertion that the British people are not prepared to make colossal sacrifices to restore to power the Polish regime, for which he had nothing but contempt, was made by Lloyd George in a letter he sent tonight to Polish Ambassador Raczynski.

The letter is Lloyd George's answer to another letter from the ambassador replying to an article published in the Sunday Express by Lloyd George. In that article, the former premier spoke of the "wretched class of government" that left Poland "entirely unprepared for war" and then fled to Rumania leaving its soldiers without proper defenses.

The Polish ambassador, in his letter, charged that Lloyd George had the least right to criticize Poland's defense on the grounds that he was responsible for "some of the strategically indefensible frontiers of Poland."

Returns to Attack

Returning to the attack tonight, Lloyd George repeated his charges and added that "the Polish peasantry are living in great poverty owing to the operation of the worst feudal system in Europe. That is why the Russian troops are being hailed as deliverers."

It was necessary, he added, to draw a distinction between the actions of the Soviet and the Nazis. The Red Army, he said, marched into territories which were not Polish and which were forcibly annexed by Poland, despite fierce protests and armed resistance of the inhabitants.

"In these circumstances," he declared, "it would be an act of criminal folly to place the Russian advance in the same category as that of Germans, although it would suit Hitler's designs that we should do so. I am delighted that our government has shown no indication of committing this country to such an attitude or enterprise."

Russia Defended

It should be made clear, he urged, that Great Britain and France were not fighting to force back under Polish rule unwilling people of another race, nor for restoration of the regime that failed in its country's hour of need, but for "the rights and liberties of free and independent peoples, who are being subjected one after another to the cruel bondage of ruthless aggression."

Finally, Lloyd George denied it was his intention to relieve Great Britain of its guarantee to Poland, although he had protested in Commons against giving that guarantee without prior Russian support.

"Without Russian support," Lloyd George concluded, "I knew it was impossible to implement our promise. Events proved my forecast to be only too painfully accurate. But as a result of the collapse of Poland we are confronted with a new situation with which we shall probably have to deal before the end of this week."

D. C. Woman Tells Of Athenia Horror

was expected to remain in New York for several days.

As the Orizaba crept into her pier under a fine, chilling rain, thousands stood on the docks in wild salute to her coming, the Associated Press reported, as she pushed slowly up the bay her 240 passengers ran shouting to the deck rails when the Statue of Liberty showed through the mist.

Texas Girl a Heroine

There were many heroes and heroines of this disaster, but it appeared that Helen Hannay, a sophomore at the University of Texas, led all the rest. Her father, Judge Allen Hannay, of Houston, met her down the bay and handed her a two-page letter from Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to London, officially commending her for plunging into the fast-flooding hold of the Athenia to the aid of several women and children.

This she accomplished while she was suffering the nausea of seasickness, and in the process she broke her left arm and shoulder blade and suffered an injury to her eye. But she wouldn't talk about any of it, except through her father.

This is the story of the death of the Athenia, as put together from the reports of those who saw her die, and of the unforgettable moments of her sinking:

The prelude and the attack, as seen by Charles Cotterman, an instructor at Ohio State University, who was taking the air on deck with his friend, Dr. Bronson Price, a fellow-instructor:

A submarine suddenly appeared, within the vision of many passengers, and loosed her torpedo. As it struck, Cotterman and Price were thrown to the deck, and as they fell they saw the bodies of five men come hurtling up through the after hatch.

"A Terrific Splintering"

The scene inside, as young Maxine Robison of Austin, Tex., remembered it:

". . . A terrific splintering. . . . The lights went out. . . . The ship listed toward port side. The tables overturned. . . . We scrambled out into the passageway. . . . It was dark and we lit matches to see. . . . There was surprisingly little panic. . . ."

Glimpses of what happened to some of the 28 Americans still missing:

Miss Louise Mackey, of Gladewater, Tex.— ". . . in our lifeboat I don't think more than 8 or 10 were saved . . . The rest just died in the water, I guess."

Mrs. May McGoarty, of New York —". . . I put her (7-year-old Margaret McGoarty) into a lifeboat—and that's the last I ever saw of my daughter."

Miss Mackey—". . . I heard a man scream as the propellor blade shot into his body, but then it was such a bedlam of shrieks . . . the splintering of wood of the lifeboat . . . that I don't remember much more . . ."

"Many People Screamed"

How old age and youth carried on.

Mary Little, 0, of Philadelphia, the oldest survivor—"I was in the dining room. I just kept quiet in my seat. Many people screamed, but I never do that . . . fearful time getting into the lifeboat . . . When I did, I was told I'd have to get out, that something was wrong with the boat. I fell getting out, but was only bruised. Somebody threw me into another boat and I just toppled over . . . Never thought I'd get here, though."

tonight announced the Poles finally had been convinced of the uselessness of further resistance.

Germans said their reluctance to "wreck Warsaw" was due to the fact that this resistance was not due to responsible government and military leaders, who had fled, but to civilians who were misinformed as to their situation.

Althuogh civilians, by taking part in the defense, in the German view, had deprived the city of its standing as an unfortified town and had invited bombardment, it was said here orders to protect civilians as much as possible remained in effect.

A spokesman said Germany had refrained for a week from assaulting Warsaw and that this restraint apparently was misinterpreted as weakness by the Polish command.

So force was reapplied and after the capture of outward defenses and a thrust toward the central railway station by the Germans, a Polish offer of surrender was received this morning.

"The resistance of Warsaw was completely hopeless and had nothing to do with heroism," a spokesman said.

"Apparently the Warsaw command finally realized its responsibility in placing tens of thousands of civilians in danger without serving the slightest military purpose."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Screen to Reveal Inside Story of British Navy

'Battle Fleets of England' New 'Time' Release; Garbo's 'Ninotchka' Hailed as Comedy Smash; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE SUPPOSED STRATEGY of the allied Western democracies in the European war being what it is, and today's newspaper headlines being what they are, the next issue of "The March of Time" should prove a screen item of extraordinary interest. It will be devoted to "The Battle Fleets of England."

With strict censorship of news, pictures and motion picture film now in effect throughout Europe, the editors of "The March of Time" are particularly fortunate in being able to present this comprehensive, inside story of the British navy at this time. I do not pretend to know by what acute sagacity Paramount News has been able to maneuver the news "scoops" it has engineered since the war started, but no such secrecy prevails in the matter of the "Time" release.

BELL

Production of "The Battle Fleets of England" was begun some two months ago when Lord Mountbatten and the late Sir Roger Backhouse, after negotiations with the British admiralty, made it possible for "The March of Time" to be the first motion picture company ever permitted to film the complete activities of the British navy.

As "March of Time" cameramen completed each phase of their assignment, their undeveloped film was shipped immediately to New York. They were still "shooting" aboard British naval vessels in the North Atlantic and in the Mediterranean when England declared war on Germany. Some scenes, filmed in the fortified British colony of Hongkong, China, were sent to the United States by transpacific Clipper plane after war broke out. Dreadnaughts, cruisers, destroyers, submarines and aircraft carriers in action, all are shown in this pictorial resume of the branch of the service upon which Britain and her allies place chief reliance to bring about victory through both economic and armed attack.

This release marks a resumption of attention on the part of "Time" to vital aspects of the war, following a brief respite during which carefully documented consideration was paid less belligerent topics. "The Battle Fleets of England" will add to the accumulation of authentic information provided by the same company's "In Nazi Germany," "Mediterranean Defenses" and "Inside the Maginot Line."

"The Battle Fleets of England," like all new issues of "The March of Time" will find its first Washington outlet on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater. It will be shown as an added feature of the bill starring Deanna Durbin in "First Love," which will follow "Nurse Edith Cavell" on Fifteenth street. That might put it as far as a month away, as the crow flies. In the meantime, "Inside the Maginot Line," presenting the first pictures ever made in France's $2,000,000,000 fortifications along the German frontier, will occupy an important place on the bill at the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater, beginning tomorrow, in conjunction with the repeat downtown engagement of Priscilla Lane and John Garfield in "Dust Be My Destiny."

A boom in henna dips seems to be in the offing. All red-headed young women in the Capital are invited to join an Ann Sheridan Red-head Club now being organized by radio Station WJSV. At the first meeting of the club, scheduled for early next week, in the WJSV studio in the Earle Building, the new members will meet Miss Sheridan, who opens a week of personal appearances on the Earle stage tomorrow. To join, it is only necessary to write a letter to the Ann Sheridan Red-head Club, care of WJSV, giving your name and address. Red-headed men are not eligible. The studio isn't big enough!

Oscar Doob, the doughty chief publicist of the Loew organization's New York home office, fellow-Hoosier that he is, has gone mildly maudlin again over Greta Garbo's forthcoming production of "Ninotchka," directed by Ernst Lubitsch. "'Ninotchka,' just screened," he says, "is a surprise hit if there ever was one! It's cinematic champagne! It's sparkling satire! It's rollicking romance! It's bubbling burlesque! Garbo cuts a new notchka in her career. She takes comedy in her stride. BUT—watch for the Lubitsch touch! You'll feel it in your funny-bone and around your blush-glands!" So, in view of all this, Oscar has changed his name again. When "The Wizard of Oz" came out, it was OZcar Doob. Now it is Otchka Doobka!

Beginning today, and continuing for one week, the official motion pictures of the Joe Louis-Bob Pastor fight will be shown at the new Hiser Theater, in Bethesda, Md. The ringside film will be shown as an extra added attraction on evenings only, except on Saturday and Sunday, when it will be included in the matinee program. So now you know.

Loew's Capitol Theater is off again on its "sports parade." Every year at about this time, the F street house plays host to the footballers. It will inaugurate the practice this season tomorrow night, when all members of the Washington Redskins as well as the complete squad of New York Giants—opening the pro grid season here on Sunday—will be guests of the Capitol management. Captains and coaches of both famous elevens will be introduced from the stage by Cliff Nazarro, the stage bill's double-talking headliner. Hope you'll be able to tell what he's talking about.

Eddie Cantor is taking with him on his current personal appearance tour the widely heralded 13-year-old singing star, Leni Lynn. Cantor's route includes Chicago, Pittsburgh, Columbus, Ohio; Rochester, N. Y.; Boston, Brooklyn, and Washington, D. C. Careful, Eddie. That cockeyed child labor law still is in full force and effect in this man's town.

If you care to see what The Post's Hollywood columnist, Hedda Hopper, really looks like, you will have a double-barreled shot at it next week. She is briefly cast with Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, et al., in "The Women," holding over at the Palace, and will be seen in a more important role, as Jackie Cooper's mother, in "What a Life," opening on the screen at the Earle tomorrow. If that doesn't appeal to you, you still can find her likeness on this page.

The-Pardon-Came-Too-Late Note

I was going to say something about Warsaw's having proved that the Nazi army can't take it, but it's too late now.

THE NEWSREEL speeches of Count Jerzy Potocki, the Polish Ambassador—together with some of his other public utterances which have been received so well by the American press—were written with the aid of Dorothy Thompson . . . Public subscriptions will keep the Czech and Polish Pavilions open at the Fair next year . . . Six weeks ago, when Bob Moses selected the buildings he wished to retain—after the Fair grounds are converted into a municipal park—the only foreign pavilion he selected was the Polish one . . . Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis last week confided that he'll keep all movie stars away from the playing field during the World Series games. His tirade was aimed particularly at Joe E. Brown.

TWO MONTHS ago Liam O'Flaherty, author of "The Informer," announced that he was quitting America, that Europe was the only place in which to live, and that he was going to Paris . . . Mr. O'Flaherty now has rushed to his farm in Dublin. In a letter last week to a friend here O'Flaherty wrote: "Europe now is like a prize ring, full of wrestlers walking around each other, hurling insults, never coming to grips—and you feel that it's all been rehearsed."

Senator John Bankhead will return to the Capitol to vote in favor of the President's proposed neutrality bill . . . Margot Graham, the screen actress who married one of Canada's wealthiest men, is negotiating with Lee Shubert for a new show.

ORSON WELLES, who will produce, direct, write and portray two roles in "Heart of Darkness," has postponed production for three weeks. A visitor at his home saw the first page of the screen play and noticed that Orson had written only one line so far. That line read: "'Heart of Darkness, by Orson Welles. Scene One, Opening Shot. I Enter. (Closeup.) Fadeout."

KRESS, one of the defendants in the $427,000 Rubel Ice robbery case, has filed an appeal from his 10-year sentence. Against that appeal, however, District Attorney Dewey has filed an indictment for bail-jumping in connection with another crime, which will mean a 10-year sentence also . . . Jimmy Roosevelt has streamlined the bulky Hollywood contracts, which weigh more than a pound. He arranged a simple, one-page contract for Dudley Nichols, the Academy Award winner, to write a movie for Goldwyn . . . Newport is cutting down on the debuts planned for next season. Instead, 40 debutantes will be presented to society at a mass cotillion.

GILL PATTEN, who, as Burt L. Standish, wrote all the Frank Merriwell stories, spends his summers in the village near Camden, Me. The townsfolk revere him, and point to Patten as their most celebrated neighbor . . . A group of business men approached Patten a few weeks ago, confided that they were reviving the Ku Klux Klan there, and invited him to lend his name and prestige. "But I'm for freedom and tolerance," Pattan insisted . . . "This'll be a different kind of Klan," he was assured. "We're out to fight all isms. We're tolerant all right. So when will you join?" . . . "I'll join," Patten replied, "when Harry Marshall, our Negro farmhand, who had two sons in the last war, also is invited to join."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 27.—Past, present and future stars might take a squint with profit, at Marlene Dietrich's crystal ball. She arrived some years back after singing a few blue songs in "The Blue Angel." We met and fell for her natural beauty and willingness to meet us more than half way. They gave her Gary Cooper and Adolphe Menjou for "Morocco;" a couple more pictures nearly as good. In the meantime, her clothes sense and personality changed. Instead of painting the lily, she caricatured it. But always left the legs (which were, and are, nearly perfect) alone. She chatted about her child, baked you a cake. But was told that wasn't glamorous. She got a quarter of a million per picture. And almost twice that in London for "Knight Without Armour." Over there she kept her first dinner guests, who included 65 men from the press, waiting an hour before she arrived. But they forgave her because she was Marlene.

HOPPER

Poor Janice Logan suffered her second tonsilectomy. She's had a difficult time on "Dr. Cyclops" because it's another "King Kong." Set is oversized and the beast is supposed to shrink humans to one-fifth their normal size. He succeeded but not with Janice's tonsils.

First picture after Maurice Costello married a 29-year-old girl, he appeared in a wedding scene.

Norman McLeod has a letter from Grover Whalen saying the day "Remember" was shooting there was was the high spot of the Fair, without a star in sight. They were taking background shots. Now we know they need a press agent!

Do you remember Hazel Hurst the blind girl who wasn't allowed to land in England, due to her seeing eye dog? She's spent the summer here, and received enough donations to buy six dogs. She's just flown East to confer with her friend Mrs. Charles Lindbergh and see if she won't head the Woman's Movement to keep our boys from fighting over there. Truly the blind shall see!

One of the sweetest secretaries in all Hollywood is about to be married—Martha Jenkins, who has been with Frances Marion five years, and Bill Powell before then. Frances is giving her the wedding at her home within the next month. The lucky man is J. Wallace Lorah.

Frances Langford has gotten, and still gets, two gardenias every time she sings over the airways from twin fans. I saw 'em. And why, in the name of all that's holy, can't we find a good spot for Kenny Boker? That's one of the finest voices of our generation. He's young, good looking, was grand in "The Mikado." So what? We give him to the Marx Brothers.

You boys with Barber Shop burbles better contact O. C. Cash, who's got it and willing to part with it for some fancy lost chords, for his oil company. Incidentally, what a name for a man who has got it!

When our leading men and comics arrived at the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco, the only one among that crowd of Wally Ford, Billy Gilbert, Buster Keaton and Preston Foster, they didn't recognize was John Howard, who has grown a beard for "Green Hell." But after they see him in "Disputed Passage" every studio will want him. Paramount has a big hit in that. And even Dottie Lamour acts.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Sept. 27 (NEA).—The busiest actor in our village is Joel McCrea, who is not only Paramount's fair-haired boy, but in demand at other studios too. Edward Griffin has put in a bid for Joel as soon as he finishes De Mille's "Northwest Mounted." I was interested to hear about Griffith's own story, "In Old Virginia," which Virginia Van Upp is preparing. This is the same team that did "Honeymoon in Bali," one of the cleverest of the modern comedy dramas.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The title "In Old Virginia," is a misnomer, for this is a modern story—so modern that Miss Van Upp is now in the South interviewing the Governor of Virginia and other officials. Shots will be made there and in Washington and although this sounds expensive, it really will be kept in the limits of wartime economy.

Magnificent is the super-adjective applied to Zorina in "On Your Toes." "That Gal Has More S. A.," writes one of my scouts, "than any girl in years." I am not surprised, for she had all that and more on the stage in "I Married an Angel," where her dancing and personality made such a hit with theatergoers. Zorina won't do that Rodgers and Hart musical on the screen, however, for M-G-M owns it. Through the underground route, I hear that Jeanette MacDonald will have the Zorina role when she finishes "Lover Come Back to Me" and "Smilin' Through." That means, of course, that Jeanette's songs will take the place of the Zorina dance numbers.

Very secretly Constance Bennett has been talking a stage play which it is expected J. J. Shubert will produce. Lily Hatvany's "I Am Different," which starred Tallulah Bankhead, may be her starring vehicle. Not in its present form, but a rewritten version and, I am told, Shubert would like to have Zoe Akins prepare another treatment in her first free moment. Whether or not the play which fared badly on the stage last year could be made sufficiently interesting even with Zoe's treatment is problematical, but La Bennett, like many of our other Hollywood actresses, is definitely looking toward the stage for the coming season.

Bill Simpson burned the midnight oil, and on a school night, too, to tell me that nothing can keep this year's Academy Award from Spencer Tracy for "Northwest Passage." "He plays a scene at the deserted fort for which there is no other word but supercolossal," quoth my Pomona reviewer, "and as for the photography—it is the most beautiful your town has ever turned out. There's only one thing I would like to know—why didn't they do the entire book? However, they hinted, via the preview cards, that a sequel was coming up." Bill also saw, the next night, Robert Taylor's new picture, "Remember," which he terms a very pleasant comedy.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Starting tomorrow I'm in line for mother-in-law jokes. Parsons, jr., becomes Mrs. King Kennedy, 2d, tomorrow afternoon; nice to see Marjorie Daw and Myron Selznick together at the "Intermezzo" preview, both looking sooo happy; Ginger Rogers, arriving very late, had to sit on the stairs and she seemed to like it; Mrs. Charles Feldman hostessing a cocktail party Friday for Ethel Borden and Mrs. Vincent Astor, who are here for one day; saw Irene Dunne at Maggie Ettinger's cocktail party. She is battling hay fever. Also had a chance to talk with Gloria Dickson, who looked so pretty in a smart red outfit; Sally Eilers, wearing a swank new black outfit, arrived with the Jules Steins; Lupe Velez came with Art Lashelle and both of them admit it's love. Lupe is far more subdued than she used to be when she and Johnnie were battling.

The Jack Warners gave a huge party at the "Elizabeth and Essex" preview and brought all the film elite. If I were a fashion writer, I might be able to describe the gowns the girls told me they planned to wear. Dolores Del Rio in an Irene creation of sables and gold, Joan Bennett in silk jersey and so on down the line. A Bette Davis picture is an event in our town and not in years did so many stars express a wish to attend a premiere; Tony Martin made a beeline for the studio to see his Alice, when he got off the plane today; Bill Frawley couldn't be sadder. He has to miss his first world series because of work.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Films Are Easy On Defendants

It's a cinch for the defendant when the movies have a murder trial. While counsels harangue, object, call witnesses and get themselves over-ruled, the accused is usually playing golf or just sitting on his patio.

Paul Muni chose the beach for the first day of his murder trial in "We Are Not Alone." As close-ups of king's counsel, judge, and jury were being shot, Muni was basking on the beach at Santa Monica.

The only thing spoiling his pleasure was the realization that, unlike a real, genuine criminal, he eventually would have to face trial for the same crime twelve different times—for as many different camera angles.

Lunts' "Shrew" Opens National Season Monday

'Outrageous Production' Tops Incoming Week; Other New Bills

"THE TAMING OF THE SHREW." The Alfred Lunt-Lynn Fontanne production of the Shakespearean comedy will open the season at the National Theater next Monday evening. While the stars have decked their "Shrew" with midgets, acrobats, songs, hounds, striking costumes and called it an "outrageous production," they have not changed the text of the play. The play is the first in this season's subscription series of the Theater Guild—American Theater Society. Sydney Greenstreet, Richard Whorf and Edith King head the supporting cast of 60 and the settings are by Carolyn Hancock. Matinees will be played on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

Capitol

"DANCING CO-ED." Lana Turner, Richard Carlson and Artie Shaw are the featured players in this new screen comedy, which concerns a contest to find America's greatest dancing co-ed. What makes this story different, however, is the fact that the film studio conducting the contests has planted a vaudeville hoofer in a college to be sure of picking a promising winner. Besides the screen debut of Artie Shaw, the collegiate "King of Swing," the cast boasts Ann Rutherford, Lee Bowman, Thurston Hall, Leon Errol, Roscoe Karns and June Preisser. The Capitol stage revue is headlined by Cliff Nazarro, the double-talker of radio fame. Mary Raye and Naldi, dance stars; Ginger Manners, vocalist, Allen and Kent and the Rhythm Rockets are others on the bill. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"WHAT A LIFE." The merry stage play, which introduced the airlanes' Aldrich family, comes to the screen with Jackie Cooper and Betty Field in the leading roles. John Howard, Janice Logan, Lionel Stander and Hedda Hopper are others involved in this hilarious adventure of life in high school. Ann Sheridan, noted as the "oomph" girl, headlines the stage revue, in person. The young actress has many screen performances behind her and also is an accomplished singer. Other entertainers on the stage will include Duval, Berle and Dee, dance rhapsodists; A. Robbins, "Comedian with New Ideas;" Gwynne, "Aristocrat of Deception;" Billy Blake, trumpeter, and the Roxyettes. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"FIFTH AVENUE GIRL." Ginger Rogers remains for a second week in her latest happy charade. The facile comedienne plays a philosophical member of the unemployed who captures the fancy of a rich, unhappy man and brings order to his turbulent mansion. Walter Connolly, Verree Teasdale, Tim Holt and James Ellison are in the cast.

Palace

"THE WOMEN." The widely discussed film version of Clare Booth's satirical play, with Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford and Rosalind Russell in the leading roles, continues for another week. The cast includes Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler, Phyllis Povah, Lucille Watson, Hedda Hopper, Florence Nash and Ruth Hussey.

Metropolitan

"DUST BE MY DESTINY." After a week at the Earle, this latest co-starring vehicle for John Garfield and Priscilla Lane returns to the downtown sector. Unlike their other films, this one boasts a happy ending. The supporting players include Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Billy Halop, Bobby Jordan, Henry Armetta and John Litel. Opens tomorrow morning.

Columbia

"THUNDER AFLOAT." Accorded its world premiere at the Capitol two weeks ago, this saga of the World War's splinter fleet stars Wallace Berry as a tugboat captain who joins the battle against the marauding U-boats. In the featured roles are Chester Morris, Virginia Grey, Douglas Dumbrille, Carl Esmond and Rags Toomey. Opens tomorrow morning.

Trans-Lux

"SOLDIERS WITH WINGS." The "March of Time's" latest release, which concerns the air defenses of the United States Army, is the central short subject of the new week at the newsreel theater. "Arabian Bazaar," a "World Window" film of Bagdad, and Donald Duck's adventure, "The Autograph Hound," are the other shorts. Opens tomorrow morning.

Gayety

"DAUGHTERS OF EVE." With Lovely Renee as the star of the production, the Gayety Theater's new revue will open on Sunday afternoon with an established company of burlesque favorites. Louise Rogers is one of the leading display artists and Jean Lee is an added attraction. The comedy will be in the hands of Max Coleman, Lou Devine and Jess Madden.

Open Air

"GOOD GIRLS GO TO PARIS." Joan Blondell and Melvyn Douglas are the stars of the comedy opening tonight at the drive-in theater on the Richmond highway, to run through Saturday evening. Miss Blondell plays a waitress in a college town, who seeks a wealthy student whose father can be made to finance a European jaunt for her.

Atlas

HOOT GIBSON will headline the stage revue which opens Sunday at the northeast house. The cowboy film star will have his own act and also be master-of-ceremonies for the supporting bill which will include Eddie "Nut" Kaplan and Georgie Kaye and the Ted Adair revue. "Each Dawn I Die" and "Beau Hunks" from the double-feature screen attraction.

Little

The spectacle of Charles Laughton, Raymond Massey, Boris Karloff and Melvyn Douglas rattling around in "The Old Dark House" is a delirious expose of hokum. It opened its run yesterday at the Little Theater and if, as it did us, the marquee-choking cast startled you, the willy-nilly happenings on the storm-swept moor will make you quiver like a Chesapeake nettle.

But not necessarily from fright. The adventures of this houseful of storm victims first burst upon a world still tingling from the unaccustomed thrills of "Dracula" and "Frankenstein." Back in the early 1930's people went to the theater for jolts and shivers; now those melodramatics have acquired a sly touch of artifice that is deliciously amusing.

Chugging across the moors in a sorely tried car, Massey, Douglas and Gloria Stuart are set upon by a tremendous storm. They seek refuge in a bleak house, in an atmosphere recalling "Wuthering Heights." It is a home of grim mystery; those who do appear are more demented than people generally are and those whose appearances are merely hinted at for much of the film are stock figures of horror.

The story is from a novel by J. B. Priestley, and if that sharp-witted author wrote it for any reason other than to hold the horror-fanciers' attention, he is a far less literary light than he would have the public believe.

Mr. Laughton enters the scene as a puffy industrialist on his way to becoming a "magnate." At the moment, however, he is sharing his road with a London chorus girl and the storm forces them into the house of mystery. Lillian Bond is his unabashed lady friend and Ernest Thesiger is one of the more responsible members of the turbulent household.

There is not a chance in the world that such a cast could ever again be amassed for a mystery tale of such whopping proportions.

Historic Engagement

Whether the British or German official account is nearer the truth, it is doubly confirmed that an action between warships on the one side and airplanes on the other has been fought in the North Sea.

Equally apparent from the two versions is the fact that the battle was indecisive. The Germans claim to have lost no planes while sinking an aircraft carrier and damaging a battleship. The British claim to have suffered no damage while destroying one plane and injuring another. Seemingly the British have some prisoners to substantiate their story.

Conflicting claims, however, do not minimize the historic importance of this engagement between an arm of warfare which has been developing for thousands of years and one which is still in its infancy. The protection of distance and that of encircling ocean alike diminished with this battle, as significant as that of the Monitor and the Merrimac, in which the aggressor may have inflicted no injury, but certainly suffered little himself.

It cannot be too frequently emphasized that in nearly every respect the course of this war, and its consequent lessons for belligerents and neutrals alike, is not going to be according to the pattern of 1914-18. This attack on a British squadron by a fleet of 20 German planes is a portent of which the importance can be appreciated by any civilian. It indicates all too clearly that naval strength is now relatively much less reliable than heretofore assumed.

For Permanent Relief

Col. F. C. Harrington, head of the WPA, is not overly impressed nor greatly cheered by Department of Labor reports showing pronounced increases in industrial employment during the past month.

Addressing a radio audience last night, he said: "Right now, in addition to the approximately 2,000,000 WPA workers, there are almost 8,000,000 unemployed workers available to private industry." He added that "relatively few" of the 1,300,000 workers dropped from WPA rolls since last January have succeeded in getting private jobs. Col. Harrington emphatically discouraged hopes that the war in Europe might provide a solution of our unemployment problem. He hazarded a guess that if this Nation keeps out of the war our present unemployment of 10,000,000 might be reduced next summer by one-sixth or one-fourth at most.

While Col. Harrington's outlook may be affected somewhat by fears that Congress will cut relief appropriations still further for the next fiscal year, his estimates of the volume of unemployment are conservative compared with other unofficial estimates. Moreover, his warnings against overrating the stimulative effect of the European conflict upon domestic business activity and employment are well-founded. He rightly concludes that a solution of our difficulties must be found in strengthening our domestic economy, not in looking abroad for a temporary stimulus, certain to be followed by serious economic dislocations when war ceases.

It does not follow, however, that the WPA ought to be left undisturbed because we are confronted by a high degree of chronic unemployment. Yet that is strongly implied by Col. Harrington when he asserts that the WPA has been doing good work in strengthening the national economy and that the work should continue. "Provide real jobs for these WPA workers, and you can have them, and welcome," he asserted in his radio address. "But do not ask us to dismiss any more WPA workers because of predicted jobs to come from the European war."

In making that appeal Col. Harrington has ignored the paramount issue. That is, whether Congress should accept the WPA as a permanent agency for dealing with chronic unemployment. Up to the present time the WPA has been regarded as a temporary organization established to take care of a passing emergency. If, as now appears probable, permanent provision must be made for a very large number of unemployed, the situation calls for a much more thoughtful approach.

The last relief bill passed by Congress undeavored to eliminate some of the most conspicuous abuses and weaknesses of the existing system of Federal work relief. It merely scratched the surface. Need for a radical overhauling of the entire system is only made more imperative by indications that severe unemployment has become a permanent charge upon the community.

Dissolving Communism

In the general election of May, 1936, the French Communist Party polled 15 per cent of all the votes and emerged as the third largest party in the present Chamber of Deputies, where it captured 72 seats. Throughout France no less than 800 separate municipalities were until lately under Communist control, and the leading party newspaper, L'Humanite, was not long since boasting a daily circulation of 500,000.

Now, by decree of the Daladier government, the French Communist Party has been dissolved, its papers suppressed and any activity by its agents in either the political or industrial field made a criminal offense. Even in wartime such drastic action against an organization so seemingly powerful would be expected to arouse strong resentment. But, so far as can be gathered, this act of repression is as strongly approved by French labor and liberal circles as by the most reactionary members of the famous "200 families."

The explanation is that the Russo-German alliance, with all its unanswerable revelation of Communist deceit, had shattered the French Communist Party before the government took action against it. The strength of this party in France has always been in adherents who supported it as a hard-hitting opposition rather than from ideological conviction. Daily throughout this fateful month tens of thousands of these "fellow travelers" have repudiated the Communist organization in France. The dissolution ordered by the government on Tuesday merely completes a process which was automatically taking place.

In lesser degree the French experience is being repeated in every democracy where the agents of the Third Internationale have been allowed a free hand, and where the liberal tradition has tolerated and even encouraged the "boring from within" which is an essential part of Communist procedure. The moral in France is more graphic because the disease had made great headway there. But it can be appreciated by every country which has experienced sit-down strikes, "Popular Front" demonstrations or other manifestations of the revolutionary technique.

The French are a very liberal people, possessing perhaps a stronger sense of the rights of the individual than is found in any other country. But the French are also a very realistic people. In matters of importance sentimentality plays little part in their thinking. The Communist Party in France was doomed as soon as its essentially treasonable character became clear. And this occurred when Moscow demonstrated its willingness to plot against the security of France while outwardly posing as an ally of that country.

In the United States communism has never achieved even a shadow of the progress accomplished in France. It has precipitated some serious disorders and strikes, but to a large extent American communism is a parlor game played by dilettantes whose proletarianism is most pronounced at cocktail parties.

Except in the case of a few zealots, willing to follow the party line even in circles, this type of "liberal" is already rather thoroughly decommunized. And of the 2,850 Communists said by Representative Dies to be on the Government pay roll, few, if any, would today admit the impeachment.

This is not so much due to fear of exposure and dismissal as because the average "fellow traveler" is today pretty well cured of Communist flirtations. And the more he personally is stung by the double-cross of Moscow the more anxious he is to forget that he ever invited disillusionment.

A clear line of distinction, in other words, should be made between the active agent of the Soviet government, and the mere deluded sympathizer who, in the great majority of instances, will henceforth be almost pitifully anxious to disown his former loyalties.

Evidence before the Dies committee indicates that there are far more Communist than Nazi "fellow travelers" in this country. The committee would do well not to be misled by this. It is not the simple sympathizer; it is the competent and unscrupulous professional agent of foreign principals who needs to be watched and registered under legislation already passed for that purpose.

Aid According To Need

It is of more than passing interest that the committee on housing of the American Institute of Architects has indorsed the rental policy of the local Alley Dwelling Authority. After a careful study of low-cost housing problems, the committee urges adoption of the local policy on a Nation-wide scale, even if amendment of the United States housing act is essential.

In its dealings with the United States Housing Authority, the ADA has insisted that subsidies should be granted to tenants on the basis of family need instead of being used to effect a blanket reduction in rents charged. One effect of this local policy is to avoid the segregation of families with very low incomes into special housing projects. The ADA's new houses will accommodate some self-supporting families and others on relief. All of the residents, however, will be drawn from existing slums.

From the social viewpoint, this policy saves public-housing projects from the odium attached to poor-house communities. From the financial viewpoint, it discourages the payment of fixed subsidies over long periods of years. Perhaps even more important, it encourages the tenants of public housing to become self-supporting as quickly as possible.

When rental benefits are spread evenly over all units in a housing development, the tenants may actually find it to their disadvantage to increase their earnings. An increase in salary may put a breadwinner outside the small-income group that is accommodated in the project. So he is inclined to forgo advancement in order to retain the substantial benefits of a USHA-subsidized dwelling. That anomaly alone is a potent argument against the policy the USHA is now following.

"In principle," says the architects' committee on housing, "subsidies in rent, or contributions toward rent from whatever source, should be for only those who need them and in proportion to their needs. If the administration of the USHA feels that this cannot be fully realized under the law as it stands, then there should be initiated a move for amendments to the law."

The fact that the USHA indorsed this sound principle in granting loans to the ADA should hasten its application on a much wider scale.

Heroic War Finance

Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced yesterday that the standard rate of the income tax—the British equivalent of our normal tax rate—is to be raised from 5 shillings 6 pence per pound of income to 7 shillings for the rest of the current fiscal year, and to 7 shillings 6 pence next year.

These rates amount to a tax of 35 per cent and 37.5 per cent, respectively, at first sight a seemingly impossibly heavy exaction to levy upon those who become subject to this taxation with an annual income the equivalent of $800. Of course exemptions—individual and for dependents—substantially reduce the amount actually exacted from taxpayers in the lower brackets. Nevertheless, with the already modest exemptions further lowered and with increased consumption taxes on many articles, the war budget will exact a terribly heavy toll.

The fact of outstanding importance is that the British government has decided to rely upon increases in direct taxation to cover a substantial part of the costs of war. There are, of course, only two ways in which any government can meet its expenditures—through taxation or by borrowing. Inflation might be considered a third method but it is, in essence, a concealed form of taxation, since it raises prices and thus forces individuals to cut down personal consumption as taxes do.

The task ahead is one to test the nerve of any finance minister, for the borrowing program as well as the tax plans will impose tremendous strains upon private incomes. The extraordinary defense program had already thrown the budget seriously out of balance. When the budget for the present year was framed the government expected to borrow somewhat over £340,000,000 for defense purposes. In July that figure was raised above £500,000,000, a sum estimated to be as large as, or possibly larger, than the volume of national savings for the year.

In other words, even before the advent of war the government's demands on the capital market were such as to leave nothing over for the needs of industry and other capital requirements.

The government has demonstrated its belief in the willingness of the people to make sacrifices in now adding to the direct burdens imposed upon them. While the people must in any case bear the costs of a war, weak governments seldom dare to rely upon the direct levies which make a nation acutely conscious of those costs. To do so is evidence of political strength as well as a form of protection against the disorders that result from inflationary financial expedients. That Great Britain can altogether avoid inflation seems most unlikely. But she can come nearer to doing so than any of the other belligerents.

The greatest handicap that confronts the nation is that it enters on war with a huge volume of debt and with an excessively burdensome tax system. The dead-weight debt was close to £8,200,000,000 at the end of the last fiscal year, a great sum for a nation of 46,000,000 people. When the war is a thing of the past, the interest on that debt, and on the sums that will have been added to it, will remain a charge upon future generations of taxpayers.

For that reason as well as for those already cited, the decision to raise as much as possible by taxation must be called heroic.

Railway Nocturne

AFTER THE DARK and deserted streets, the station, at first, seems to be fairly bustling with activity. But seems so only for a moment. The young man at the information desk lounges with his chin on his hand; at the news stand a boy in a tan shirt leans back in his chair, dozing. Even the red-caps make only a half-hearted offer to carry your bag.

The people scattered here and there on the benches eye you languidly, without interest. On the one near the telegraph desk a small, dark, foreign-looking woman in a black dress sits apathetically. Two children, a boy and a girl, lie sprawled out on the bench on either hand, their heads pillowed in her lap. There is an air of patient misery about the tableau.

The coaches are filling up rapidly. It is hot and sticky on the plush seats waiting for the train to get under way. The man across the aisle is fanning himself with a newspaper; in the seat ahead a perspiring blonde of about 16 is struggling perspiringly out of her white summer coat. A few seats away, on the other side of the aisle, an old man is removing his collar, stuffing it into the pocket of the coat that hangs from the hook above him. A brass collar-button gleams at his Adam's apple as he sits down, placidly begins to munch a chocolate bar. He is barrel-chested, broad-beamed, ruddy.

The man with the horn-rimmed eyeglasses is studying, above his newspaper, the woman who is standing at the end of the aisle, looking around, rather uncertainly, for a seat. She is middle-aged and pudgy. Her hat looks wide as a wagon wheel. She meets his eye, takes the empty place beside him; chivalrously he lifts her bag to the rack overhead.

We are beginning to move; there is a period of jerking and backing up, then the train settles into smooth forward motion. Almost immediately the conductor comes in, his black sateen coat ballooning up behind him in the rush of cool air as he opens the door, begins to take up tickets. At his heels is a white-coated waiter renting pillows. No one seems to want any.

The old man across the aisle examines the heavy gold watch that has been weighting down the pocket of the vest hanging below the rack. In another pocket he finds a cellophane-wrapped package of cigars—stogies, pencil-thin. He lights one contentedly. It is not the smoker, but in a moment there are a half-dozen cigarettes going, filling the coach with haze.

The lights are dimmed. All about you your fellow travelers lie sprawled, inert, dozing. Outside the window is another world . . . dark fields . . . the deeper black of woods . . . a lonely house with a lighted window . . . a road white in the moon . . . a world eerie, mysterious, unreal . . .

You wake up stiffly. It has grown chilly in the coach. Two o'clock. They say vitality is lowest at 2 o'clock. "The hour when sick men often die and sentries, on lonely ramparts, stand to their arms." The train is slowing down. You catch a glimpse of dim-lit, deserted streets, a city sunk in sleep. On the platform outside trainmen with lighted lanterns are walking up and down. You can hear their voices, but not what they are saying.

Then, after an endless interval, the train is in motion again.

Four-thirty. We are at a standstill. The man with the horn-rimmed glasses is getting off. From the platform outside, as he passes the window, he lifts his hat, bobs his head toward his erstwhile seatmate. She bobs back, smiling, then looks around a bit defiantly. It is getting bright outside. As the train pulls out of the station you can see, on the street below, a bakery wagon making its morning rounds.

Only an hour, now. The world is waking up. On the road running parallel to the tracks the early morning traffic has begun—milk trucks, trucks loaded with farm products, and small cars filled with men in overalls and blue jumpers. They keep pace for awhile, then slowly drop back and out of sight. In a field beside the tracks a chestnut mare and her spindle-legged foal are grazing.

The landscape outside begins to take on a familiar look. The lights in the coach go off, and at once it seems gray and cold.

Again, the train has begun to slow down. On a bench in a little park beside the tracks a girl appears to be adjusting a stocking; at the opposite end a shirt-sleeved man sits with his back politely turned.

And then we are in the yards. On all sides a maze of tracks, yard engines puffing, shoving freight cars. Everywhere bells clanging, the sharp hiss of escaping steam.

Doors opening and shutting. Trainmen shouting. A last, long, gliding stop. The journey is over. You climb down the steps stiffly, emerge into a place filled with a seashell humming, into the half light of the rumbling cavern of the trains.

Freud And Religion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The passing of Freud centers attention on the uncompleted final expression of his, no doubt, genius. Religion, he states, is a type of neurosis. It is significant that it is a war aimed particularly at accomplishing the extinction of religion that has ended Freud's career in sorrow and expatriation, harried to his death by circumstances which he had helped to create.

He has achieved fame along his line. But he has devoted his scientific researches entirely to the lower levels of personality. He makes no allowance for the creative power of the higher element in personality to which religion appeals.

Recognition of a supreme power appears in varying form in all religions. It is at times mixed with superstition, the theologies, dogmas, cults and other interferences and imperfections, but the inherent faith predominates. Neither persecution nor the incomplete analysis presented by the Freudian system, even though masterful, will suppress it. Religion has to be reckoned with as if it were a great natural force which reappears when its annihilators thought it finally crushed. It cannot be destroyed. At the times when it is submerged the greatest catastrophes occur. Witness the present frenzy and upheaval of civilization.

Neutrality Plan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Despite the avalanche of inflammatory material loosed on us daily via print and air, the sentiment for "peace at any price" in this country is overwhelming. I have my suspicions that a similar sentiment existed amongst the poor, deluded peoples of England, France, Germany and Poland before they were "trapped" by their so-called statesmen, and sold down the river.

We are told that our neutrality law, which was conceived and created in a calm, sober moment, is a snare and a delusion; that it should be repealed so that arms and ammunition can be supplied under the "cash and carry plan."

If that's the best plan our so-called statesmen and public leaders can advance, it strikes this correspondent that it is up to one of the prospective "innocent victims" to suggest a more sensible course of procedure, which I do as follows:

1. Re-affirm our present neutrality law (which reflects the considered peace sentiment of our Nation, and which places an embargo on arms and ammunition).

2. Add the following amendments: (a) "Cash and carry" for all articles of commerce included in the lists of contrabands promulgated by belligerent nations. (This proviso gives us a real cash and carry plan, and cuts the Gordian knot.) (b) Prohibit American ships entering combat zones. (c) Restrict travel abroad, and prohibit citizens from traveling in vessels of belligerent nations. (d) Prohibit all loans and credits to any country overseas for the duration of the war.

No positive, airtight, foolproof, 100 per cent safe neutrality program can be fashioned, I admit, but at least the suggestion above is an approximation of the ideal neutrality policy.

I close with one prediction. If we are foolish enough to sell our souls for a mess of pottage by permitting the sale of arms and ammunition, the war over there may last the seven years Hitler promised. If we keep our heads and refuse to sell arms and ammunition, the war should be of short duration. Each day the war lasts increases this country's chances of going to war.

CLARENCE DANKMEYER.

Washington, Sept. 20.

Alexandria Arrest

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While motoring through Alexandria, Va., recently in a car loaned to me by a friend in Washington, I stopped just around the corner from the main highway leading from Mount Vernon, in order to make a purchase in one of the local stores. Upon my return to the car, I wanted to get back to the highway without getting confused by going around the block, and so I turned around in the street, as I have been accustomed to do in Chicago for the 25 years that I have driven a car, and as I do in almost every other city in the country unless I see signs stating that "U" turns are not permitted.

Two local policemen stood on the opposite side of the street watching the procedure, and instead of warning me when they saw I was about to violate a minor traffic regulation, they waited until I had completed the turn, and then one of them stopped me and took me to the station. When I explained that I was a stranger and displayed my drivers' license from my own State, it was suggested that perhaps I had stolen the car and I was informed I would be held in custody until I produced the owner, and that even after that I would have to post a cash deposit to assure my appearance in court the next morning.

No amount of explanation that business in Washington would prevent my returning the next day, that both my companion and myself were entirely unaware that a turn such as I made was violating an ordinance, had any effect. I was compelled to post the cash deposit, which of course I could not recover being unable to return to Alexandria at the appointed time.

I have traveled the country over in an automobile and have learned here in my own city that traffic policemen can be pretty rough with traffic violators, but never have I seen a guardian of the law deliberately permit a stranger and visitor to violate an ordinance for the purpose of arresting him to collect a fine. Had the violation been a universal one such as speeding or passing a red light, I would have expected the treatment I received and justly so.

My experience in Alexandria should be a warning to motorists from other parts of the country to keep as far away from it as possible, unless they wish to run the risk of suffering similar indignities.

Confusion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has come to our attention that in some cases our organization, the National Association of Regulars, has been considered to have had some connection with another organization of somewhat similar character, which we believe is known as the Regular Veterans Association.

We would appreciate it very much if you will permit us to advise your interested readers, through this letter, that the National Association of Regulars, with offices in the Victor Building, has no connection—officially or otherwise—with the Regular Veterans Association.

EDGAR H. TABER,
Adjutant General, N. A. R.

"Least Harm; Most Good"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When our neutrality law allows us to furnish war material to the dictator warring nations, and prevents us from furnishing the same class of materials to the democratic countries, it is about time to revise the law. Our sympathies are naturally with the democratic countries, but, through Italy, we are no doubt furnishing Germany with all kinds of war material, if not directly, then Italy could send her material to Germany and stock up on material from the United States, in preparation for the time when she would go into the war on the side of Germany.

This one defect in our neutrality law might well be the deciding factor in which side wins the war. I say defect in the law, because, considering the complicated political alignment in the warring and neighboring countries at present, it causes our neutrality law to become unneutral. Under these conditions as they exist, and will probably continue to exist, our only way to become truly neutral, not only by word (which at present does not act), but by actions, is to sell anything we have to sell to any nation that will come and get it in their own ships, and pay for the cargoes before leaving port.

The present neutrality law should not be voted changed to cash and carry just because one is a Democrat or Republican, or has some other political views, but for practical reasons. It will do the least harm and the most good for our country.

WILLIAM CARLETON.

Lexington, Va., Sept. 17.

Family Opinion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We, an average American family, imbued with sincerity and high purpose, a deep patriotism for our beloved country and its people, and a strong desire to promote and protect true democracy, desire you to know our opinions on the pending neutrality legislation:

Neutrality can only have one meaning. We can sell to no warring nation and lay claim to neutrality. If we, as a country, are sincere and wish to discourage war, we must be firm in our purpose of not supplying implements of war to any nation. England's present plight is a flagrant example of the lack of sincerity of purpose of that nation.

Already too many dollars stained with the blood of innocent Chinese women and children repose in this country, due to our materialistic viewpoint and the result of our selling scrap iron to Japan. We can rise to great heights amid a war-mad world if a true love of humanity and a firm desire to help its progress rather than to deter it, for our own material gains, inspires us to maintain a true neutrality.

We expect our representatives in Congress to heed the voices of their people.

FRANCES H. JENKINS.

Washington, Sept. 24.

Genuine Or Organized?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The source of the many letters sent to members of Congress favoring retention of the arms embargo should be investigated.

It is no doubt true, as Mark Sullivan says, that the desire of all these letter writers is the maintenance of peace, whether they favor retention or repeal of the embargo, but it is also the consensus that no one can be positive as to which course of action is the wiser in order to maintain that peace. Therefore it is of great importance to discover the motives of these correspondents. Were they stirred to action by their love for America and its form of government, or is it organized propaganda designed to influence legislation favorable to some other country or countries?

BEATRICE TUCKER.

Washington, Sept. 25.

Capital Export

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our arms embargo as a means of keeping us out of the European war is a silly expedient, as sale of arms by neutrals to warring nations is not barred by international law. They are but an item in the list of war contraband of which we have plenty for export and are a sure source of trouble and friction to involve us sooner or later.

As a business proposition it is even sillier, for if we persist in it what is to prevent Canada from becoming a large scale arms manufactory with American capital, machinery and material?

Rep. Fish's Ethics

WITH SPECIAL interest I listened the other night to that part of an oration by Representative Ham Fish which dealt with propaganda and false report, because the reference brought to mind an interview with Mr. Fish about two years ago wherein he himself revealed, in aggravated form, that very carelessness regarding the source and truth of information against which he now lectured his fellow citizens.

At that time our statesman, representing the deep plush district, which includes the homes of President Roosevelt and his mother, was about to return to one of the Hudson River towns for a political jollification and had prepared a speech giving his distinguished neighbors the rough side of his tongue.

A Hero In Sports, On Battlefield

HIS OFFICES are adorned with souvenirs of his feats in sport and war, for he was a Walter Camp All-American at Harvard in 1910 and captain of a colored infantry company in several battles in France and once, upon a night in 1917, presented himself at the officers' mess of an Alabama unit with an offer to fight the best man present on behalf of his soldiers, who were suffering molestation by the white boys of their command. Being now 51, he is less athletic than he was, but mentally and spiritually he gives an impression of not having aged by so much as an hour since he left Harvard or, for that matter, since he entered.

On this day in Washington Mr. Fish tossed across the draft of his address to his constituents and sat back obviously anticipating irresponsible chuckles. He had wrought some pretties, and, as Harold Ickes will allow, the effect of a speech comes not so much from the thought contents as from the casual whammies placed at the end of the paragraphs. These are not easily done but are the result of much stall-walking, lasting sometimes far into the night, and, in most cases, are tried out on the little woman or the secretary. I am not a good guinea pig for such experiments, having a rather high boiling point in the matter of oratorical humor, and I am sure Mr. Fish was entirely unprepared for my startled interruption at the point where he accused the President's mother of receiving $35,000 from the Government for the repairs and maintenance of her home, which Mr. Roosevelt was using for his summer White House.

Made No Attempt To Check The Facts

I ASKED Mr. Fish where he got this information, assuming, of course, that he was sure of his facts, and he replied by flipping out of a nest of papers a fan letter from a constituent signed with a name which meant nothing to him. That was all he had to go on. He didn't know the person, the person gave no authority or proof and Mr. Fish himself had made no effort to check, but was going to use as fact an item of gossip which, incidentally, later kicked around the country until Steve Early, in a story called "Below the Belt," recently took notice of it and spurned it with his foot.

Later in the same oration Mr. Fish, on no better authority, was going to repeat another hot but scandalous rumor about Mr. Roosevelt, also without checking and with no qualms or qualifications whatever. This one, I believe, was the report that the President's own father, in his will, had provided that Franklin should have no hand in the management of the estate because he had no appreciation of the value of or meaning of money. I think that was it, but if not it was equally unpleasant and probably equally untrue, as this one proved to be when after receiving the same report in a dozen or more letters from various cities I checked the will, on file at Poughkeepsie.

Mr. Fish seemed surprised at my quibbles on these two points and said he could qualify them by saying "It is said" or "it is believed," apparently under the impression that that was the way newspapers acquired information and absolved themselves of libel.

Minton's Charge Also Recalled

AS TO WHETHER he finally did use this material once it had been challenged I don't know, but I was impressed by his recklessness, as compared to the ethics and care of newspapers, in preparing to use it to the point where a question of authenticity was raised.

I was similarly impressed recently by a speech delivered under cover of his Congressional immunity by Senator Minton, of Indiana, who once offered a bill for newspaper censorship in the interests, as he said, of truth. In this address the Senator flatly charged, but without a word of proof, that a dozen prominent Americans had corruptly bargained with a Republican Commissioner of Internal Revenue to receive back millions in tax refunds in return for a few thousands in contributions to the Republican National Committee.

If you will just read those dice I think you will observe that I have made my point.

arms shipments to the bill, and to make the opening opposition speech in the Senate after Pittman concludes his defense of the measure.

Chairman Pittman apparently was not counting on a committee report before tomorrow or Saturday, but said he was assured of enough committee votes to bring the bill out when the test is made. Under an informal leadership agreement, debate would open in the Senate on Monday and continue, at least for the first week or two, with "normal" five-hour sessions each day.

At the first threat of "filibuster," leaders are expected to prolong sessions in an effort to break it, but opposition Senators insist they have nothing in mind but legitimate debate. This, they said, might well run to the last week in October, or longer.

Senate support for the bill continued to run about 2 to 1 as of yesterday. Administration canvassers claimed an outside figure of 63 votes, but included in that total at least six as yet publicly uncommitted and three regarded as doubtful. An opposition leader claimed a present maximum of 35, also conceding that several on his list were in the "doubtful" category.

President Has Majority Now

Disregarding all doubtful votes, the Administration yesterday appeared to have more than the necessary Senate majority (49), if the issue were to go immediately to a vote. Opponents hope to tilt the balance against the bill by debate in the Senate and public forums, but Administration spokesmen, resting on the adage that speeches change no votes, insisted it remains only for the roll to be called.

Real concern meanwhile was manifest at the Capitol by representatives of shipping interests lest the bill's tight ban on American ships moving goods to warring Nations deal a set-back to forward strides of America's growing Merchant Marine.

Spokesmen for the United States Lines, the Dollar Line, the United Fruit and Matson Lines, as well as representatives of aviation interests and Pan American Airways, were said to have voiced this concern to Senators.

It was pointed out that regular airline service to South America called for stops at British and French possessions, while fruit line movements through the Caribbean to Southern waters, as well as ship service to New Zealand and Australia, might be hard hit.

Bailey Studying Appeals

Among those who disclosed he was giving close study to the appeals of the shippers was Chairman Bailey, of the Senate Commerce Committee, who has taken no public stand on the new bill.

Another Senator prominently identified with Administration neutrality bill strategy disclosed he was considering an amendment to broaden the scope of operation of American ships. Some leaders felt the issue should not be injected into committee debate, but should later be presented on the floor.

Pittman in his speech last night challenged the view that repeal of the embargo necessarily would aid France and Britain, in control of the seas, as against Germany, which has no way of getting American materials.

He said that under the embargo, Russia can legally import arms, and retransport them into Germany. Italy also, which is still neutral, he said, can buy arms from us and sell them to Germany. And he further asked if America should withhold manufactured arms from "the small, peaceful countries of the world" which have depended on international law to purchase materials for their defense.

Pittman Outlines Bill

The Senate Foreign Relations chairman outlined in detail provisions of his new bill, carrying embargo repeal with the President's six antiwar points, and adding the sharp seventh restriction on American shipping put forward by Pittman himself. These, he insisted, strengthened existing neutrality legislation, and impose new and mandatory cash and carry safeguards that have never existed in prior law.

Pittman declared the shipping restrictions were necessary as "it is conclusively evident that the German government intends to pursue the same policy with regard to the submarining of neutral merchant vessels engaged in commerce with their enemy."

Answering arguments that extensive credits granted belligerents by Americans, and desire for business by munitions manufacturers, led America into the last World War, Pittman said loss of American lives by submarinings at sea precipitated America's entry, and declared Senator Borah based his vote for war "upon the destruction of the lives of our citizens upon the high seas in violation of our rights under international law."

Contending that his bill's cash and carry provisions would aid in removing this incentive to war, he said that "we cannot afford to lose the lives of our seamen for the consideration of trade even though under international law we have a legal right to engage in such trade."

Treasury May Offer 526-Million Refunding Issue

With the Government bond market showing signs of settling down, the Treasury likely will enter the market in the near future, probably October 15, with a financing operation, delayed when the outbreak of the war caused a severe break in Government bond prices, it was learned yesterday.

Expectation, however, is that no new cash will be borrowed at this time. The financing, if it materializes, will consist of a refunding offering for $526,232,500 of 1¾ per cent notes falling due December 15. A five-year note issue or a medium-term bond may be offered.

Secretary Morgenthau had intended to refund the December note maturity, and borrow about $500,000,000 of new money, on September 15. But the war upset the bond market to such an extent that it was impossible to determine the interest rate that even a refunding offering would have to bear.

The controversy said to have arisen between Morgenthau and Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board over continued Federal Reserve support purchases of Government bonds, it is reported, had as its basis a desire on Morgenthau's part that the bond market be allowed to find its own level in order that the financing might go forward.

War Of 1914 Is No Guide

By Mark Sullivan

The Future Is Hazy

THE DISQUIET that enmeshes everybody is caused, we say, by the war. That is accurate. But in the present opening stage there is a special cause of moody frustration. It is the inability to foresee, the impossibility of being confident about any phase of what may be ahead. This uncertainty not only weighs upon the spirits of individuals. It creates difficulty in arriving at national policies. We cannot feel certain that any policy will be best for the circumstances, because we cannot know what the future circumstances may be.

In the disquiet this leads to, almost one feels it would be more comforting to know the future, even if that future were ill, and be able to face it resolutely, rather than continue in uncertainty. But continue in uncertainty we must, for we cannot know the course this war will take, or estimate its ramifications, until the pattern of it develops more clearly. The only material for surely estimating the course of this war is the events of the war itself, as they develop.

One contribution of light is possible. It is negative, yet it is something. We cannot reason about this war by analogy to the one 25 years ago. Most of such reasoning as is attempted proceeds upon that analogy. That it is probably fallacious can be readily shown.

I HAVE before me a compilation by a thoughtful economist showing differences, even contrasts, between fundamental conditions in 1914, in the United States and in the world, and the corresponding conditions of 1939. These contrasts are as diverse as a jumble of sticks tossed into a heap; hardly any two point in the same direction. It is impossible to make any deduction from them —except the broad and negative one, that the war of 1914 provides little or no guide by which to speculate about the war of 1939.

Before setting down some of these differences, which are mainly in the economic field, let us consider one that might not occur to an economist.

Within the United States certainly (and possibly also in the world) the largest one difference between 1914 and 1939 is a difference in state of mind. This difference arises from the mere fact that in 1914 we had fought no great war—while in 1939 we have had that experience. The memories of the 1914 war, the aftermath it has left in our emotions, the pattern left in our minds, will probably be the largest single factor in determining our emotions, actions and national policies about the war of 1939.

TURN NOW to differences between 1914 and 1939, in the economic and political fields. In 1914, Britain and its Allies in Europe had some 320,000,000 people. In 1939, only some 120,000,000, even including Poland, now out of commission. (Britain may later acquire more allies.)

In 1914, Germany and her associated countries had 143,000,000. In 1939, about 80,000,000. If we include Russia, some 250,000,000. (The difference is, mainly, that in 1914 Russia was against Germany.)

In 1914 the United States' Federal national debt was a little over $1,000,000,000. Today, including guaranteed debt, over $46,000,000,000. (Would we so lightly have incurred that debt had we known a world war was ahead of us?)

In 1914, the United States' Federal expenditures were $7.17 for each person of the population In 1939, about $75.

In 1914 the United States had less than $2,000,000,000 in gold. Today, some $16,000,000,000.

In 1914, all important countries had sound currencies on a gold basis and all had balanced budgets. In 1939, managed paper currencies and an unbalanced budget are the rule in leading nations.

In 1914, international trade was reasonably free, except for relatively low tariffs in some countries. In 1939, international trade is impeded, as perhaps never before during any peacetime period in modern history, by quotas, embargoes, restrictions on exchange, systems of barter.

IN 1914, Britain was largely a free-trade country. In 1939 Britain has tariffs comparable with those of the United States.

In 1914, after war began, prices in our stock market descended so rapidly that the exchange was closed. In 1939, outbreak of war was accompanied by violent rise in prices.

In 1914, our stock and commodity exchanges were self-governed. In 1939, the stock exchange is controlled by SEC, and most commodity transactions are controlled by the Department of Agriculture or through other Government agencies.

In 1914 there was no Communist country — communism existed only as an idea in the minds of a small number of persons. In 1939, the largest compact nation in Europe, Russia, is communist. And in one respect that country, without much fighting, has played a large part in this war. Although Germany has done more fighting, Russia has acquired the most territory in Poland, and has more greatly extended its influence.

This list of differences between 1914 and 1939 could be greatly extended. As the reader will see, few of the differences run parallel; many contradict each other. They fall into no pattern. Anyone who makes deductions about 1939 based on conditions in 1914 must do so from selected groups of data, ignoring others.

Nevertheless, though conditions change and differ, principles remain. Presently these fixed principles will be recognized as a framework around which conditions and events will group themselves in a recognizable pattern.

Today And Tomorrow

New Embargoes For Old

THE CASE of the Swedish steamers, Gertrud Bratt and Silesia, is worth studying for the light it throws upon the problem before Congress. These ships were carrying wood products from Sweden to England. They were sunk this week by a German submarine, and in a semi-official communication the German government justifies the sinking on the ground that wood is a war material because cellulose is used in making explosives and lumber is used in coal mines which produce fuel that "is absolutely necessary for the production of war materials." It is stated in Berlin that "the German submarine commander only did his duty in hindering the transportation of cellulose to Britain, since from there it would have been returned to Germany in the form of high explosive shells."

Thus, we see that neither in theory nor in practice does the German government recognize that there is any difference between the goods covered by the American embargo and the goods that are not covered by the embargo. Everything that a belligerent would wish to buy is to be treated as contraband of war; the German argument is, in substance, that since no belligerent can afford to buy goods of any kind that are not necessary to the prosecution of the war, it is unnecessary to search a ship bound for Britain. All imports are equally liable to destruction.

All Exports To Foe Viewed As Target

THAT BEING the position of the German government, as stated in words and confirmed by its acts, what becomes of Senator Vandenberg's contention that the special embargo on arms is "the internationally acknowledged trade-mark of neutrality?" The German government acknowledges no such trade-mark; it expressly insists that raw materials will be treated as indistinguishable from the finished products listed in the embargo proclamation.

Senator Vandenberg has only to study the case of these two Swedish ships to see that he is trying to make a distinction which has been expressly repudiated by the German government. If his object is to protect the United States from becoming "the target" of one side because it is "the arsenal of the other side," then, as the experience of Sweden proves, all exports are equally a target.

But if the Senator studies the situation as disclosed by the case of the Swedish ships, he must in all fairness, it seems to me, conclude that what made Sweden a target was not the character of the goods sold to Britain, but the fact that they were being carried in Swedish ships. It was the destination of the ship and not the nature of the cargo that made Sweden a target. Any other cargo in a Swedish ship bound for a British port would, as the Germans frankly tell us, have been destroyed, since any cargo bound for Britain must be important for Britain.

This fact is the basis of the Pittman bill. It recognizes that the belligerents do not make any distinction among cargoes destined for their enemies. Therefore, it embargoes the ships which carry the cargoes. In repealing the distinction between arms and other materials, a distinction that in principle, practice, sentiment and morals, no one abroad acknowledges as having anything to do with neutrality, the Pittman bill enacts two new embargoes, in many ways more comprehensive than the existing one. Whereas the present law lays an embargo on the armament industry, the bill before Congress places an embargo on the shipping industry and upon finance.

Claim It Is Unneutral To Change The Rules

IF THE OPPONENTS of the bill now take the position that they approve the new shipping and financial embargo but must retain the arms embargo as well, they will find themselves in a very awkward position indeed. For they will then be arguing, though this cannot be their real intention, that it is perfectly "neutral" to impose additional disadvantages on the Allies after war breaks out, provided Nazi Germany retains all its advantages.

They have been telling us, have they not, that it is "unneutral" to change the rules of the game once war has been started. Well, the embargoes which they like and approve in the Pittman bill change the rules of the game. They lay embargoes which prevent the Allies from buying transportation and credit. These two embargoes are of great importance. They did not exist when war broke out, and if it is unneutral to repeal the embargo against selling arms, it is just as unneutral to lay two new embargoes against the sale of transportation and credit.

Men like Senator Vandenberg and Senator Borah cannot have it both ways; if they really believe it is unneutral to change the law now, then they should oppose all changes in the law now.

If, on the other hand, they approve the proposal to change the law and lay the new embargoes, then they ought not to insist on retaining the distinction set up in the old embargo. For that distinction is repudiated by the German government. To insist on the distinction is inadvertently to adopt a view that is more pro-German than that of the German government.

Nazi Government Makes No Distinction

IF THE GERMAN government makes no distinction between one cargo and another, why do these Senators insist that the Congress of the United States must make the distinction, and in the name of neutrality pile new embargoes on the old embargo to the increasingly grave disadvantage and peril of the Allies? They should certainly not wish the country to believe that they are acting on the assumption that it is neutral and safe to injure the Allies but unneutral and dangerous to make a move which might displease the other side.

The fact of the matter is that all this legislation is based on the idea that when the Nazis have a grievance they are dangerous, whereas the Allies may be hurt because they cannot and will not retaliate. Whether all of us realize it or not, this is a gigantic gamble that no matter how many difficulties we impose upon them, the Allies will, nevertheless, win the war.

But suppose they do not win it. What then? Does the Congress think that governments like those which now rule Britain and France would be able to make peace with a victorious Hitler? The defeat of the Allies must almost inevitably mean a revolutionary upheaval in Britain and France, and the rise of governments that are capable of coming to terms with the totalitarian states. In the week before war broke out, Hitler offered the British an alliance. They refused, but another British government, one brought into power by defeat, would have no reason and, above all, no means of rejecting the alliance. And where, with Russia occupying Germany's "living space" in eastern Europe is another living space to be provided, where but in this hemisphere, in the rich defenseless lands that we, with our Navy tied up in the Pacific, are nevertheless pledged to defend?

It is not prudent, therefore, to assume that we can safely hurl embargoes at the Allies because for the time being they are unable to reply.

Soviet Ship Sunk as Estonia Is Berated for Aid to Poles

German-Soviet military agreement; formation of a new Balkan-Near Eastern bloc under the guidance of Turkey and Russia; and a joint German-Soviet request that Turkey act as intermediary in attempts to negotiate peace in western Europe.

Credence was lent to reports that Japan was playing an important part in the Moscow negotiations when it was learned that Japanese Ambassador Shigenori Togo conferred last night with Molotoff.

Russia has bitterly criticized Estonia following the escape of the interned Polish submarine Orzel last Monday from Tallinn Harbor. The craft was interned after it sought refuge in the Estonian port.

A communique last night said Estonia's explanation of the incident had been "unsatisfactory." It went on to say that "one can arrive at the conclusion that some unknown submarines have a secret base somewhere near the Estonian coast" and added:

"In consequence of these circumstances the question of insuring the security of Soviet waters against diversionist acts on the part of hiding submarines acquires great importance."

The government's announcement of the sinking of the Mettalist said the attack occurred near Narva Bay, on the northern coast of Estonia. Soviet patrol ships were said to have rescued 19 of her crew of 24.

Last night's communique cited reports from Leningrad that "periscopes of unknown submarines" have been sighted near Luga, in the Gulf of Finland near where the Mettalist was said to have been sunk.

Predict Soviet-Nazi Deal

Berlin, Sept. 27 (AP).—Predictions that a Russian-German deal would be brought about swiftly were made in official circles today and it was said the Germans obviously expected the Moscow negotiations to have an important bearing on the conduct of the war and the possibility of extension of German influence in southeastern Europe.

"After the lightning war in Europe follow lightning negotiations in Moscow," was the phrase used at the foreign office.

Attention also was called to the fact that Turkish and Estonian foreign ministers also are in Moscow, and one spokesman declared events have impressed on Turkey the "wisdom of perhaps revising her estimate of the value of a British guarantee."

He said an appreciable turn in the Turkish foreign policy, which he termed agreeable to Germany, already had been noted.

Estonia Tense

Copyright by New York Times.

Tallinn, Sept. 27.—Although the Estonian population knows little about the extent of the crisis, owing to scanty newspaper reports, there is a general atmosphere of tension and apprehension which was aggravated by the Moscow report about the Soviet steamer Mettalist, and the fight over Tallinn and elsewhere of bombers from a Soviet aircraft carrier off the coast.

Estonia ordered the military not to fire on the airplanes which flew low.

It is regarded as certain, though, that Kremlin demands are for wartime control of the big island, Dagoe, and Baltischport, which is Estonia's only ice-free harbor.

It is rumored that Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop's visit to Moscow has some bearing on the Estonian question and attention is directed to recent articles in German newspapers about the situation of the small Baltic countries, described as "hopeless" without German support.

It is suggested in informed circles that Estonia is prepared to meet the Soviet claims as far as possible to alleviate suspicion about Estonian neutrality which remains absolutely firm.

The Soviet's brusque accusation of Estonia's neutral conduct in connection with the escape of the interned Polish submarine Orzel from Tallinn is viewed apprehensively. It was denied that Estonia permits foreign submarines to use Estonian bases.

Hitler Sending Courier

Berlin (Thursday), Sept. 28 (U.P.).—A highly reliable informant said today a special plane, carrying a courier with instructions from Fuehrer Hitler for Foreign Minister von Ribbontrop, will take off from Berlin for Moscow before noon.

The informant would not hazard a guess what the instructions were but it seemed possible they might deal with Soviet intentions toward Estonia.

Rumors circulated that the "final" peace plea to Britain and France may be accompanied by an announcement of "still closer" Russo-German military co-operation and a joint warning by Germany and Italy that the Allies must stop attacking or "take the consequences."

Bulgaria Represented

Moscow, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—Political conversations which may result in additional changes in the map of Europe were under way here tonight among statesmen of Russia, Germany, Turkey, Estonia and Bulgaria.

The chief of Bulgarian civil and military aviation, Col. Vasil Bogdev (Boydeff) arrived to discuss opening of an air line from Moscow to Sofia and thence to Greece. It was reported without confirmation that of the air agreement is reached, trade and political conversations will follow.

Molotoff's talk with the Japanese recalled Berlin reports of a possible Russo-Japanese nonaggression treaty. It seemed certain that Germany was attempting to harmonize Russo-Japanese relations with a view to obtaining Japanese support in event of a spread of the European war.

Germany, it was believed, already has consented to any measures Russia may wish to take against Estonia.

The Recluse

You are NOT going to the Twitters' party! Just as you are all ready to settle down this fall and do some serious work, along comes this invitation. Well, you'll simply nip all this partying in the bud right now. Still what excuse can you give? . . . And you did go to Marcia Burlap's tea . . . And Jane and Marcia are at each other's throats . . . Oh, well, you'll go through with it this time, but it's positively your swan song. You're through, and you mean it!

"Guess who's here?" says Jane Twitter leading you toward a woman whose back looks vaguely familiar. The woman turns. It is Irene Chumley! . . . Irene whom you haven't seen since college days . . . And she's just the same old friendly, gushing Irene. You find yourself expanding under her warmth and enthusiasm. You are looking "simply marvelous," she tells you, really younger than you did in college. And one of the chief reasons she was glad to move here was that she would be able "to see a lot of you."

"Good old Irene," you think to yourself, She always was such a loyal friend. It IS nice to see her again . . . Will she and her husband come to dinner with you next Thursday? . . . They will.

Mrs. Gadsby, the stranger with whom you find yourself talking, says she understands you were born in Bingsville. You admit it . . . How remarkable! She herself was born in Knobsville, 15 miles distance . . . Oh then, does she know the Juniper's? . . . and the Dudds'? . . and the Shrimps'? . . . She knows them all! What is more, she was back home last summer, and had you heard about all the big hubbub in Bingville over old Mrs. Luker's running off with her hired man——

Your hostess swoops down on you with other guests in tow. But you manage somehow to make a date with Mrs. Gadsby for luncheon next week when she will tell you the rest about old Mrs. Luker and the hired man.

You feel sheepish and guilty as you see Estelle Miffin approaching.

"Well, we still——" you begin.

"Haven't had that date together!" she supplies. You both laugh.

"Honestly, I've thought of you so many times," you insist.

"I know. I've started to call you a dozen times," she continues.

"There are so many things I want to talk to you about," you go on.

"I have a million things to take up with you," she declares.

"Well, really, we must get together now right away," you say with determination.

"Yes, we simply must!" she echoes.

"Now I'm going to call you without fail early next week and make a definite date," you promise.

"All right. I'll be expecting to hear from you," she warns.

You are powdering your nose in the bedroom when you are drawn into a conversation with Mrs. Mortimer Smart. Together you gush over the marble topped washstand, the four-poster, the old coverlet, the Currier and Ives prints. You find you both have read the best seller and the current copy of the Atlantic Monthly on the bed table.

You continue your chat in the living room. You both like all the same things, like—or dislike all the same people. What a lovely woman she is, you think to yourself. You ought to know her better. . . . She echoes aloud your thought. "I do hope we can get better acquainted," she says. "There are so very few people that one finds congenial. Can you have tea with me on Wednesday?" . . . You can.

The little group in the music room has reached the convivial and sentimental stage. The thought of not seeing each other again for several weeks is saddening them.

"Why don't we all get together and go out in the woods some Sunday morning and cook our breakfast?" asks Chubb Nitter.

"That would be MARVELOUS!" seconds Gladys Bubble.

"It's so beautiful these fall mornings," says Lucia Smiley. "Especially when the sun comes up."

"Say, I haven't seen the sun come up for ten years!" exclaims Jack Mosey.

"We live too artificial lives," observes Marie Banal.

"Well now, we've got to get this thing organized," announces Harriet March." What about next Sunday morning at Rock Creek Park—say about 5:30 o'clock?"

"Fine!" you hear yourself chorusing with the others.

Pointers and Warnings Given by Local Buyer In Discussing Problems Of 'Difficult' Types

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE SLENDER young "splinter" of a girl may get the bulk of the fashionista' attention but fall is one season belonging to the graciousness and poise of the larger, more statuesque woman. Not every full blown woman is an "older woman," nor is she necessarily even a matron. She just happens to be a woman of generous proportions who must exercise far greater caution in her wardrobe selections than a smaller woman.

Armed with this knowledge, the Junoesque woman must realize that the currently popular wasp waist is not for her, as that would emphasize too rounded a hipline. Dashes of Scotch, both liquid and in plaids, must be tabooed if a fine figure of a woman is to be realized. She must avoid too short skirts for day and those not quite long enough for dinner wear, as only long fluid lines can materialzie her queenly look.

Buyer Classifies Types

Some women, long past the girlish appeal of a size 18 frock, are yet unconscious that not all large figures are "stylish stouts." Not every large figure needs to cover up an elbow for instance, so for the enlightenment of women bordering on the larger size frocks, an understanding local buyer who features a famous designer's range of larger sizes has classified the three types of "difficult" figure proportions as follows:

SIZES 38 TO 44—The attractive young matron often wears these ranges, as she has probably just recently crossed the misses' dress size border. As every woman knows, her sense of humor is not in the coy styles she wears, nor in her funny bone—it is in the dash which she wears her simple, well-bred frocks. She prefers to wear a graceful well-established woman's dress to the tight squeeze of a misses' 18 in more kittenish styling.

HALF SIZES—This group includes sizes 16½ to 24½ for women who lack height but not dignity. Although excess fat is not the worry of the average "half sizer," it is difficult for her to find properly fitting dresses among regular styles. High waists, high stomach lines, short legs and general stubby proportions are this type's bete noir, but even these can be minimized through waist-concealing jackets, artful sleeve and bodice distractions and slightly longer skirts.

The Midas Touch Helps

SIZES 40½ TO 52½—This third type is the naturally heavy or large boned woman, who, if subtly groomed, can outshine slimmer and younger women through a self confident carriage, poise and an elegance of manner. She need not always wear black, though it is most slimming. Deep muted shades of crushed grape or earthy brown help break the monotony. She must be faithful in following her fashion A B C's, which are:

(A)—V-necklines with shirred bodice fulness for softening large bustlines; (B) gored skirts for breaking the line of heavy thighs and hips and (C) jackets, kind in their camouflage, worn by day and night.

Our informant on the dress problems to be watched by the larger women encourages the occasional Midas touch for black afternoon crepes or dinner-time velvets. Bright nailheads on the bodice of a flat-chested half sizer's frock are flattering while a lone touch of gold in the form of an orchid brooch would be appropriate worn by the full-chested larger woman. For these same heavy-armed women, gently puffed sleeves, short or jacket length, should be worn for dinner. And contrasts of ribbed wool for jackets and plain wool for simple frocks beneath are youthful yet slimming alliances.

Movie Stars Have Varied Tricks of Trade To Keep Figures Slim; Little Things Help

SOMETIMES A small and apparently insignificant concession to calories proves the turning point in weight control. The movie stars all have a few of these tricks of slimming up their sleeves and it might be worth your while to note them down for your own figure program.

Marlene Dietrich, who has a perfectly streamlined figure, never drinks a drop of water with her meals. She isn't trying to be different—she's using sound commonsense! Water with the meals stretches the tummy and increases the appetite. If she took two or three glasses of liquid with the meals—as you may do—she wouldn't be so streamlined.

Gloria Blames Salt

But wait a minute—don't jump to the conclusion that you aren't supposed to drink water! You need eight glasses, at the least, every day, but it's a smart idea not to drink liquid for an hour before or after meals. Milk is one of the favorite beauty foods in Hollywood, but most of the actresses drink it between meals for the same reason they drink water then—to avoid an excess of liquid with food.

Gloria Swanson, generally conceded to be lovelier today than in the silent screen days, has two good dietary rules. Long ago she broke the habit of using a great deal of salt with food, and she is convinced that it is much easier to control the weight simply by observing this one little rule. The explanation is that salt is linked with water retention. Salt tends to hold water in the tissues, so that the weight registers higher than it should.

The mainstays of Joan Crawford's diet are salads without dressing, lean meat and cooked vegetables—all of which contribute to vitality without making fat. Any number of stars have this rule: Never to take anything for dessert except fresh fruit. I don't know whether or not any of the stars trim all fat from the meat, but it's a good rule for you to follow. Fat contains twice as many calories as protein, starches or sugar.

Weight Matter of Habit

Claire Trevor's dietary rule is to take small meals but to take them at frequent intervals. She has three meals a day, with these extras: In the morning, a glass of orange juice; in the midafternoon, hot buillon and crackers; before retiring, a glass of buttermilk. She takes food when she feels she needs it, and isn't overly hungry at the regular mealtimes.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 27.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The hat of the early season is undobtedly that worn to the Stork Club the other night by Ethel Merman, the musical comedy star. The bonnet, made of silver fox, is bigger than any ever worn by the old-time trappers and, for all its size, is right handsome. Ethel carried out the scheme with a black wool dress and a silver fox cape, and was a fine spectacle.

Dixie Tighe, who hails from Washington, is doing a bang-up job of bright reporting on an evening paper here. She's married to "Tommy" Thompson, local correspondent of a London daily.

Wonder what it is that makes us like to smuggle things? Sometimes it certainly isn't lack of cash for the duty. Like our Mrs. May Hancock Ayer, who inherited $20,000,000 last year, and a few days ago was fined $10,000 for smuggling clothes and jewelry. She surely could have paid the duty with one hand tied behind her. Maybe it's just "original sin" with some of us ladies.

GOSSIP columnists are always rumoring marital discord between the junior Franklin D. Roosevelts and then seeing them together at one of our local restaurants in time to catch the next edition.

Certain signs of the times here are many promises of stage comedies for the winter, always a sure symptom of war times in the world, and the complete wiping out of jokes about a European dictator. For several years they abounded on Broadway—but the gentleman in question has now entirely ceased being funny, or an object of vaudeville humor.

Henry Fonda, the movie actor, spent quite a spell very quietly in the hospital here, and just as quietly recovered and headed once more for Hollywood. Hank is one of the retiring sort, even when he retires to hospital.

JOSEF, one of the town's top-shelf hairdoers, is distressed at the dictum that all the girls must wear their hair hidden under snoods and things this winter. He says it can't be done, for there aren't enough women at large who look beautiful with their locks snooded and their ears sticking out. I agree with Joe. Sweeping fashion decrees are only for sheep and things—let's each of us make the most of what we have.

Mary Haworth's Mail

"Get a Job or Get Out," Girl Is Told by Father; Failing to Find Work, She Asks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For years I have been reading your column, never dreaming that some day I would have to turn to you for advice. I am a girl 20 years old, with three years' college training, for which I have paid out of my own earnings. Even though I have paid for my education, my father now finds me too much of a burden and I must get out and strive for myself. He feels that since I am over 18, I should earn my own living. He has given me two weeks to find a job or get out. These two weeks are nearly up and, honestly, I never knew work was so hard to find.

I have answered every advertisement, have been to all the employment bureaus, etc., only to be told, "If we have anything, we will call you." My college studies were directed toward a profession, instead of the business world, so what chance have I among the thousands of others who are hunting office work?

When my time is up, I shall have no place to go, and nothing to eat. I know I can't remain at home, for when my father says something, he always carries out his word . . Please, can you tell me what to do, or where I can go for advice? Thanks from the bottom of my heart.

M. A. C.

Employment Center Is Favorably Impressed

DEAR M. A. C.: I have discussed your situation with Mrs. Ethel Starr, supervising interviewer for the D. C. Employment Center, at 808 E street northwest. She tells me that your application for employment is on file, and she gives you an 'excellent rating as to personality and appearance. Judging from descriptive data and experience, you have what it takes to make an excellent sales person.

I understand you have had about six months' training in stenographic work, which is scant preparation for business office work. But if you have a high order of intelligence, you might made the grade with flying colors, if given a chance. Mrs. Starr asks me to ask you to get in touch with her personally, once again, and she will give your problem special consideration.

In publishing your letter, it is my hope that some reader of this column may come to the rescue with an offer of a job that pays a sustaining wage. At the moment, this is the most practical help I can give you. In conclusion, I would say that your father's ultimatum is shocking and shameful—unless, of course, you provoked it by outrageous misconduct, which seems unlikely.

M. H.

Worried Over Problem, Man Fears Insanity

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man of 20 and I am worried sick. It's a long story . . . but fundamentally, I think, my trouble is sex maladjustment . . . I am not attracted to girls, although I have little trouble getting dates, but I do have a hard time establishing friendship with other young men . . . Adults claim I am eccentrically mature and I must admit that I find it difficult to talk the language of my contemporaries without feeling forced and a little foolish . . .

Finally, Miss Haworth, I have a vague fear of insanity. I seem to be growing increasingly forgetful. I find it ever harder to put my thoughts into words and to say exactly what I mean and my sense of humor seems to be growing more and more inadequate, for many things that seem amusing or ridiculous to me strike others as being situations without humor.

Sometimes, I'm inclined to think that I worry too much about myself, but even so, I realize that I am not normal in some respects and this realization robs me of happiness. I sincerely hope that you will give this situation your consideration and help me to work my way out of it . . . Very truly yours,

P. A. T.

Situation Requires Man-to-Man Talk

DEAR P. A. T.: Your problem is at once so delicate and so complex as to require man-to-man discussion. I have taken the liberty of submitting your letter in full to a psychiatrist, who returns me the following report: "This boy," (he says of you), "sounds like an intelligent but quite befuddled chap. He asks for help in lifting himself from a rut of social and sexual dissatisfaction and inadequacy into which he has drifted.

"That help must come, I feel, by way of a better understanding of his assets and liabilities—through intensive psycho-therapeutic assistance . . . The 'vague fear of insanity' of which he speaks is, no doubt, the result of an emotional interference with his intellectual functioning because of his morbid preoccupation with himself and his emotional distortions. This symptom alone—if no others existed—would indicate his urgent need of psychiatric assistance, in the formulation of healthier attitudes and a better understanding of his problem."

I am sorry not to be able to say more in this space, but if you are sincerely, desirous of bringing this situation under control and recovering self-confidence and self-respect, get in touch with me by telephone and I will direct you to a first-hand source of help.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Good Circulation Aids Flabby Legs

Hollywood, Calif.—Pretty knees are as important as a pretty face now that short skirts are showing them. Rosemary Lane comes to the rescue with knee-knowledge she picked up in physical education classes.

Anything that hinders proper circulation in the legs causes flabby muscles and over-large knees, so Rosemary advises against tight garters, tight shoes and sitting with firmly crossed knees. Angle-crossing is not only better for leg beauty, but has been considered more decorous since the first book was written on manners and morals.

White House Social Functions May Be Limited This Winter

Program of Receptions and Dinners For Season Will Depend Upon How Heavy the President's Schedule Is

By Hope Ridings Miller.

The Post Society Editor

THE WHITE HOUSE social calendar for 1939-40 may feel the effects of the war in Europe. While the program of State receptions and dinners has not yet been completed—and won't be until Mrs. James M. Helm returns—chances are official Washington will don white tie and tails for fewer functions at the Executive Mansion this winter.

It all depends on whether the President's schedule continues as heavy as it now is, Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday at her press conference. She added that at present she would not tell which parties would be omitted, but "there is a possibility" this year's calendar would be abbreviated.

Asked whether there is a question the diplomatic dinner and reception would be among the missing parties, Mrs. Roosevelt said she did not know and that the State Department would make the decision. A couple of veteran newspaper women in the conference recalled that the winter directly before the other World War, the diplomatic reception was turned into a combination Pan-American party and a welcome home fete for President Wilson and his bride, the former Mrs. Galt.

Mrs. Roosevelt smilingly averred that she was "afraid" neither she nor the President could provide a wedding to take care of the situation this time. Anyway, the social program for the season will be announced the middle of next month, probably around October 12, the First Lady said.

Doesn't Expect To Buy a Bustle

As usual, Mrs. Roosevelt's schedule will be crowded from now until October 9, when she has her next press conference. She didn't go into much detail about her plans, but she implied that she hasn't the foggiest idea when she will find time to buy her autumn and winter wardrobe.

But when she does go a-shopping she doesn't expect to buy a bustle or a single wasp-waisted frock. Said she couldn't imagine herself in either.

Some time this season—and I'd be willing to wager it will be within the next few days—she hopes to visit her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger in Seattle.

Lectures Tonight In New Jersey

Following her press conference Mrs. Roosevelt had guests lunching informally with her, and shortly afterward she left by train for Reading, Pa., where she lectured last night. She will speak in Passaic, N. J., tonight.

Week after next, Mrs. Roosevelt will be back at the Executive Mansion and on October 12 she will entertain at a tea for 1,500 postmistresses and wives of postmasters who will be here in connection with the National Postmasters' Convention.

HERE AND THERE: Associate Justice James Clark McReynolds, who recently returned to his apartment at Hotel 2400, had guests dining with him last evening . . . Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown, who spent the summer at their home in Siaconset, Nantucket, are again at their residence on Bancroft place . . . Their son, Edmund Garfield Stanley-Brown, has returned to his school at South Kent, Conn., for the second year . . . Gordon Grayson and Cary T. Grayson, jr., have left their home, Blue Ridge Farm, near Upperville, Va., and are now at Yale University . . . Their younger brother, William Grayson, is attending Sewanee, the University of the South . . . Back in town after a trip abroad is Miss Mary V. Johnson, who returned on the S. S. Stavangersfjord and arrived in Washington early yesterday morning . . . In Poland a few days before war broke, Miss Johnson dined with the American Ambassador and Mrs. Biddle in Warsaw and spent some time in Danzig . . . Later, she went on to Latvia and Estonia, and thence to Sweden and Norway.

The Wards Lease Middleburg Home

Mr. and Mrs. Newell Ward, who recently returned from Europe, arrived in Middleburg yesterday and have leased Mrs. Laura Keeler's home for the hunting season. Mr. Ward is an honorary whip of Middleburg Hunt and he and his wife will start cubbing as soon as they are settled.

Mrs. Ward is the former Miss Bettina Belmont, daughter of Mrs. Arthur White, of Middleburg. Her wedding last June to Mr. Ward was one of the most brilliant events of the season in the hunt country.

Mr. and Mrs. Joerissen Back From New England

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Joerissen and their daughter, Miss Kay Joerissen, have returned to their home in Chevy Chase after spending several weeks in New England and now have as their guest Miss Alberta Luchetti, of San Francisco. Miss Joerissen visited Miss Luchetti in California last spring.

Miss Luchetti will go to Princeton, N. J., this week-end to visit Miss Margaret Myers, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. William Starr Myers.

Brownes Have Grandson

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mershon, of Mayhill, N. Mex., announce the birth of a son on September 1 in Roswell, N. Mex. Mrs. Mershon is the former Milicent L. Browne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Browne, of Washington.

DR. AND MRS. ROBERT J. O'CONOR COFFEY

Father Wise Officiates as Bride Wears Ivory Gown With Heart-Shaped Neckline And Fashioned Along Sweeping Lines

With the cousin of the bride, the Rev. John Wise, S. J., officiating at the 10:30 o'clock ceremony in fashionable St. Matthew's Church yesterday, Miss Mary Catherine Mundell was married to Dr. Robert J. O'Conor Coffey. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white satin, fashioned with a full skirt and no train. She wore her great grandmother's lace veil held to her head with a halo of orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Sally Dallet, sister of the bride, was her maid of honor and only attendant. She was gowned in bronze green crepe, fashioned with a pointed neckline, wore chrysanthemums in her hair and carried a sheaf of bronze chrysanthemums.

Retiring Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter To Make Home Near Two Sons in Boston

THE NEAREST THINGS to cave dwellers in the Washington Diplomatic Corps, the retiring Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter, will leave the Capital next week. They have taken an apartment in Boston, where their two sons, both of whom married American girls, make their homes. There are also several grandchildren, to whom the Peters are devoted and who have frequently visited at the legation here.

M. Peter was at his retirement from the Diplomatic service the dean of foreign ministers here. Washington lost another "dean" this year when Sir Ronald Lindsay, former British Ambassador, retired from the service. What, with the war making transatlantic crossings so precarious, the Peters are not sure when they will see their native land again.

Charles Bruggmann, successor to M. Peters, arrives next week with his wife, who is a sister of Henry Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture. Another sister, the former Ruth Wallace, is married to Per Wijkman, a Swedish diplomat. M. Bruggmann served as Minister to Czecho-Slovakia until that country was "absorbed."

EVERY THIRD PERSON in the Capital seems to be writing a book these days, and Edgar Prochnik is the latest to sit himself down at a typewriter. The former Austrian Minister, who now lectures at Georgetown University, is writing a textbook—the first ever—on diplomatic history. He estimates it will be about two years before his labors are finished.

All the members of this very devoted family are rallying around to help the head of the house. His younger daughter, Patricia, who is to enroll in a secretarial course this year, will get some of her practice by typing her father's manuscript. Between classes, Patricia, who is one of the prettiest of this year's debs, will whirl around to parties.

THE PROCHNIKS are currently concerned about Mr. Prochnik's eldest daughter, Mrs. Francis Spalding, and her four children. The wife of an American diplomat stationed at Cairo, she went to Switzerland when many of her Egyptian friends told her that Egypt might not be a very safe place if the war spreads. Now her Swiss friends seem pessimistic about Switzerland as a place of calm and quiet, so her parents have written her urging her to bring her children and join them in Washington.

NOBODY CAN SAY that the Roosevelt clan isn't forehanded. Mrs. Roosevelt makes out her Christmas lists in June or July, and yesterday we ran into Mrs. J. Lawrence Houghteling doing a bit of Christmas shopping. Her father, Frederic Delano, is an uncle of the President.

MRS. CARY GRAYSON'S lovely old stone house on Wisconsin avenue has been leased by Count and Countess Andre de Limur. Opposite Mrs. Evalyn McLean's estate, Friendship, it has large grounds. Count de Limur, who was at the French Embassy here during the last World War, was pressed into service a few weeks ago while he and his wife were visiting this country. She is a member of the famous California Crocker family and before war broke out had planned a trip to her family in Burlingame. Another Burlingame-ite married to a French Embassy official, Baroness Baeyens, has returned from a visit to her family.

Others whose lives seem centered about moving vans these days are the Ronald Balcoms, who have just taken Mrs. Frank Letts' house for the winter. Mrs. Letts is the mother of Mme. Espil, wife of the Argentine envoy.

THE STATIONERS who make all those large, white engraved invitations must be suffering a business slump this year, for while there are some parties, they are all small, informal telephone affairs. This is partly because the season is still very young, but largely because officials about whom most entertaining revolves here aren't in the mood for giving "functions."

MRS. JOUETT SHOUSE has returned to Washington after a summer in New England. She spent several weeks at Bar Harbor with her daughter, Miss Joan Dodd, and then went to Cape Cod for a visit.

Mary Mahoney and Mr. Gettier United in Baltimore Ceremony

A wedding of interest both to Washington and to Baltimore society took place yesterday morning in St. Stephen's Roman Catholic Church, when Miss Mary Frances Mahoney, daughter of Mrs. John Mahoney and the late Mr. Mahoney, of this city, became the bride of Joseph A. Gettier, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Gettier, of Baltimore. The Rev. Francis J. Leary, pastor of St. Mary's Church in Hagerstown, officiated at the 10:30 ceremony, which was followed by a nuptial mass.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Margaret Walsh played and during the mass Miss Mary Daly and Miss Rosemary Dermody sang.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Edward J. McLaughlin. She wore a gown of white satin over a lace hoop skirt. Her long tulle veil was held to her hair by a cluster of orange blossoms and she carried a white prayer book, from which fell a shower of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Aileen C. Mahoney, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor for her sister. She was gowned in aqua moire, fashioned with a tight waist and full skirt, wore a matching turban, and carried an old-fashioned bouquet.

Miss Agnes McGraw and Mary Catherine Faith, of Baltimore, were the bridesmaids and wore rose gowns fashioned like that of the maid of honor with matching turbans and carrying old-fashioned bouquets.

Charles E. Meade was the best man, and the ushers were Dr. Joseph V. Jeppi, Leo Ireton, George Derr and Michael Delea, all of Baltimore.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at 2400 Sixteenth street. The mother of the bride was gowned in slate blue with dubonnet accessories and wore an orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother wore grotto blue with black accessories and a corsage of orchids.

When the couple left for their wedding trip, the bride was wearing a teal green suit with brown accessories. After October 15 they will be at home in Baltimore.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. P. F. Kelleher and Mr. and Mrs. Edward McCabe, of New York City; Mrs. Kenneth Solari and J. Harry Hughes, of Richmond, and Brother Alphonsus, of Pittsburgh, brother of the bridegroom.

The bride was graduated from Notre Dame Academy, in this city, and the Mercy Hospital School, in Baltimore. Mr. Gettier, a native of Baltimore, was graduated from Calvert Hall.

Mrs. James Aswell Here for Visit

Mrs. James B. Aswell, daughter-in-law of the late Representative James B. Aswell, of Louisiana, has arrived in Washington for a visit. While here she will occupy the family apartment at 2039 New Hampshire avenue.

Mrs. Aswell's husband, writer and lecturer, is now at their plantation near Natchitoches, La., where he is completing a novel. Formerly he was a syndicated columnist and short-story writer.

Adm., Mrs. MacDougall Staying in New York

Rear Admiral and Mrs. William D. MacDougall, who summered in Maine, are now at the Berkshire Hotel in New York before opening their apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

They are parents of Mme. de Kauffmann, wife of the Danish Minister, who has joined her husband at the Fairfax.

Caroline Rust Becomes Bride Of Mr. Williams

Couple to Make Home At Berryville, Va., Following Honeymoon

An autumn setting of white chrysanthemums, gladioli, and palms formed the background for the wedding last evening in Leesburg, Va., of Miss Caroline Caverly Rust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Newton Rust, of Leesburg, formerly of Alexandria, to Edward McCormick Williams, son of Goodwin Hulings Williams, of Berryville, Va., and the late Mrs. Williams.

The bride's uncle, the Rev. Harry B. Lee, of Towson, Md., performed the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. G. Peyton Craighill, rector of St. James' Episcopal Church, where the couple exchanged their vows. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white imported brocade satin, with a full skirt extending into a long train. Her full length tulle veil fell from a cap of Duchess lace, a family heirloom, and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Her sister, Mrs. Douglas R. Phillips, of Washington, was matron of honor, wearing turquoise taffeta with a bustle effect in the back, and carrying yellow roses. Miss Mary E. Lloyd of Alexandria was maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were two other sisters of the bride, the Misses Mary Snowden and Eleanor Newton Rust, and Miss Crimora Y. Waite of Culpeper, Va. Miss Lloyd was attired like the maid of honor, and the others wore dusty pink taffeta. All carried yellow roses.

J. Holmes Kyle of Lynchburg, Va., was best man, and the ushers were Dr. Crenshaw D. Briggs of Washington, Lorenzo C. Lewis and Richard B. Smith, jr., of Berryville, and Fred R. Malone of Leesburg.

Over 500 guests from Washington, Alexandria, Leesburg, Baltimore and Berryville attended the reception at Rockridge, home of Mr. and Mrs. Rust. Mrs. George B. Ashe of Charleston, S. C., sister of the bridegroom, assisted in receiving.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams left immediately after the reception for a honeymoon, the bride wearing a tweed ensemble in brown and gold, with matching accessories. Upon their return they will reside at Airline, Berryville, where Mr. Williams is Commonwealth's Attorney for Clarke County.

The bride studied at Stuart Hall, Staunton, Va., and Mr. Williams is a graduate of Virginia Military Institute.

Clubs in Alexandria, Silver Spring Meet

Nearby Groups Get Head Start on District Organizations; Virginians Gather For Session at Historic Gadsby's Tavern

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Two jumps ahead of October, when most of the women's clubs in the District will begin their seasons, the Woman's Club of Alexandria and the Woman's Club of Silver Spring, in nearby Virginia and Maryland, held their first meetings yesterday.

The Alexandria club had its business meeting and tea in historic Gadsby's Tavern and heard a report from Mrs. Alice Tolly Smith on the summer activities of the Girls Club, which it sponsors. This was founded two years ago as a civic project and Mrs. Smith was engaged last spring to direct its program.

Girls Attend Many Classes

During the summer the girls have had classes in dancing, sewing, knitting and cooking, she said. This winter there will be added classes in weaving, woodwork, arts and crafts and folk dancing.

Mrs. Willard N. Parker, new president of the Woman's Club, announced a card party to be held at the Girls Club October 6, both afternoon and evening, for the benefit of the fund for its maintenance.

The program yesterday afternoon was opened by Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Roberts, who were dressed in costumes of the Gay 90's and sang "Come to the Fair." Colored motion pictures of the World's Fair in New York, taken and shown by David C. Book, completed the entertainment.

Tea hostesses were Mrs. Wiley Stearns, chairman; Mrs. Burchell Leachman, Mrs. James Gooch, Mrs. St. Clair Sheltton and Mrs. Howard W. Smith.

The Silver Spring Woman's Club opened its season with a tea at the Jessup Blair Community House and will have its first business meeting there Wednesday afternoon. The club was formed last February, with Mrs. John C. Keele as president, and is the only one in the community with an unlimited membership.

Silver Spring Club Has Tea

Mrs. Keele and members of her board received the 65 guests who attended. With her in the receiving line were Mrs. Hugo Winkler, first vice president; Mrs. John Scheidy, second vice president; Mrs. G. Harris White, recording secretary; Mrs. E. R. Gates, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles Kreuger, treasurer; Mrs. Howard Smith, parliamentarian, and Mrs. M. E. Sherer, director.

There was a short musicale, presented by Mrs. White, accompanist for the club choral group, who played piano selections, and Mrs. Schneider, who sang while Mrs. White accompanied her.

Department chairmen alternated at the tea table, which was appointed in a color scheme of orchid and yellow. They were Mrs. William Dahl, chairman of civics; Mrs. A. V. Ammann, chairman of literature; Mrs. C. R. Shetterly, chairman of music, and Mrs. Harry Falk, chairman of home and garden.

Mrs. Falk's department was the first to meet this season. Tuesday the members held a flower exchange in which they traded plants and bulbs for fall planting. The art department, of which Mrs. Scheidy is chairman, will meet Monday. Another active division of the club is the welfare department under the chairmanship of Mrs. Charles Krueger, jr., which is planning extensive work.

Panhellenic Tea on Sunday Opens G. W. Rushing Season

300 Freshmen to Be Guests of Honor At Party to Be Held in Raleigh Hotel; Annual Event Introduces Freshmen Girls

The formal rushing season at George Washington University will open Sunday with a tea to be given by the Panhellenic Council in the ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel. All nonsorority girls on the campus, including some 300 freshmen, will be guests of honor.

The tea is given annually to introduce rushees to the university's ten social sororities, presidents of which will form the receiving line.

Miss Frances Roffe, of Pi Beta Phi, social chairman of the council, and Miss Jane Coulter, of Kappa Delta, council president, will introduce the nonsorority girls. Each will be provided with a name tag, designed to come to the rescue of overtaxed memories.

After leaving the receiving line, each rushee will be escorted by a representative of one of the sororities to its table, where she will meet members of the group. From there she will go to the next, until she has had opportunity to meet girls of each of the Greek letter societies.

Tea and cakes will be served buffet style and the ballroom will be decorated with banners bearing the chapter names and the sorority colors.

Following this open affair, which is one of the largest events sponsored by the Panhellenic Council during the year, the individual sororities will concentrate for a week of rushing activities. These will be climaxed on Monday, October 9, by the final formal dinner parties following which bids will be sent out. Rushees will sign their preferential bids before an attorney in Columbian House Tuesday, October 10. Informal pledging and presentation of corsages is set for October 13.

The sorority presidents are Miss Anne Joyce David, Phi Beta Phi; Miss Bette Burch, Chi Omega; Miss Hazel Smallwood, Sigma Kappa; Miss Clare Hall, Phi Mu; Miss Maxine Mitchell, Alpha Delta Pi; Miss Helen McNeil, Delta Zeta; Miss Virginia Birkby, Kappa Delta; Miss Virginia Moore, Zeta Tau Alpha; Miss Mary Lou Nash, Kappa Kappa Gamma, and Miss Florence Hayes, Phi Sigma Sigma.

Members of the Washington Soroptimist Club expect to attend a meeting of the South Atlantic Region on October 21 at Westminster, Md., it was announced yesterday at the weekly luncheon at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Jessie Walters entertained a company of ten at dinner last evening in the Blue Room of the Shoreham in honor of Mrs. Stuart Walker, who is leaving soon for her home in Charleston, W. Va., where she will spend several months, returning to her apartment at the Shoreham shortly after Christmas.

Frances Willard Centennial Party Planned by Group

Members of the active and alumnae chapters of Alpha Phi Sorority, of this city and Baltimore, will celebrate the centennial of Frances Willard's birth Saturday afternoon with a ceremony at 3 o'clock in Statuary Hall of the Capitol.

Born September 28, 1939, Frances Willard was graduated from Northwestern University, where she helped found Beta Chapter of Alpha Phi, of which she was an early national president.

Miss Willard was the first woman college president, ardent organizer and president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, pioneer in woman suffrage and prominent worker in the D. A. R.

In the field of social and labor reforms, she was a powerful figure in a century which devoted little attention to working conditions and rights of labor. Sixty years ago she advocated and prophesied a living wage, an eight-hour day, courts of conciliation and arbitration, and similar reforms.

'Calm Night:' And a Poilu Dies for France

French War Office Report Ignores Action In Advance Positions

By the Associated Press

Paris, Sept. 27.—Fortunately the handful of French troops holding the little farm which its devout German Catholic owners named Saint Paul do not read the communiques issued by the French general staff.

They would have difficulty in recognizing any relation between the communiques and the hellish fighting which has swirled about the farm the last few days.

"Calm night" was the way the general staff today described the lack of action on the Western Front.

But it was anything but "a calm night," according to French newspaper dispatches, for the unshaven French poilu stripped to the waist in the stone granary of the farm. The red-hot machine-gun barrel blistered the Poilu's hands as he tapped its butt to swing an arc of fire on the little crossroads where a lane leading to the farm leaves the main highway.

Shell Bursts Nearby

It was anything but a calm night as a shell from a German mortar dug a crater only a few hundred yards away, spewing farmyard muck into his face.

It was anything but a calm night when his comrade on the other side of his machine gun leaped up clutching his throat, then fell backward in a crazy dead sprawl in the moonlight.

"In war men fight and die on "a calm night."

Just so men fought and died among German soldiers in the German buildings of Farm Saint Paul, the once carefully tilled fields divided by the French-German frontier.

Farm Saint Paul lies two miles north of the French town of Wissembourg in the foothills of the Haardt mountains. Its typical old world house nestles among the dark woods of the Waldt Forest. A small stream winds its way peacefully through the farm before it goes on to join the Lauter River, which forms a hard-fought frontier between France and Germany.

"Calm's" Meanings

For the general staff in Paris "a calm night" meant that looking at the long Western Front from Luxemburg to the Swiss border there was no major activity there, no operations in force.

For the simple Poilu in the advance positions on German territory it meant artillery bombardment, alarms as German patrols sneaked up with machineguns in attempts to retake individual farm buildings and hastily built crossroad dugouts held by sections of 10 or 15 men.

For the Frenchmen who captured Farm Saint Paul three days ago it meant even more than that. After all-night attacks by raiding parties on the farm, a German battalion launched a dawn drive, sending waves of troops against the machine-gun nests which form what a divisional commander would refer to as an "organized advance position."

Britain Boosts Income Tax

estimated today, leaving a gigantic gap to be bridged.

The time has not yet come for the next loan operation, he said, although he foreshadowed the floating of various types of loans in which big institutions and little taxpayers alike would be expected to play their part.

Moreover, Simon confessed that one of his chief aims was to impose taxes that would curtail civilian demands.

Simon explained the seven shilling rate would be payable when the half-year installments became due January 1 and the full rate would be payable July 1.

Simon next announced a concession for those who could prove their income had fallen by 20 per cent or more below last year's figure.

New income tax rates and lowered exemptions, said Simon, would produce an additional £70,000,000 ($280,000,000) this year and £146,000,000 ($584,000,000) in the full year. To squeeze £5,000,000 ($20,000,000) more from taxpayers this year and £8,000,000 in a full year—this time from those best able to afford it—the surtax scale will be increased to one shilling three pence in the pound or about 6½ per cent for incomes of £2,000 ($8,000) and be graduated steeply upward to nine shillings six pence or just under 50 per cent for incomes over £30,000 ($120,000). All this is in addition to the main income tax of 37½ per cent.

Simon went blandly on showering blows upon the taxpayers, equivalent to another 2 cents on a pint of beer, another 26 cents on a quart bottle of whisky, another cent and a half on an ounce of tobacco, another 2 cents per pound on sugar with corresponding increases on molasses and glucose—all these indirect taxes are estimated to yield an additional revenue of £66,500,000 ($266,000,000) in a full year.

"We should bear in mind," said Simon, "that however serious our problem may be, the financial problem which confronts Germany is infinitely greater. The pound sterling remains, when all is said and done, an accredited medium of international trade.

"On the other hand, even before the war, the official rate for the German mark really meant nothing at all. There over 50 different kinds of marks, each showing a different degree of depreciation. At present, the German mark has no position in international currency, and it is likely to lose rapidly its value as an internal currency."

As for Great Britain, Simon pledged his government to discourage inflation by every means.

Md. Transit Change Is Under Study

Public Service Unit Considers Arguments Over Installation Of Shuttle Service

Baltimore, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Maryland Public Service Commission took under advisement today the application of the Capital Transit Co. of Washington to install "shuttle" cars on its line between the Mount Rainier terminal and Maryland points, during nonrush hours.

At an all-day hearing, testimony was presented by company representatives and by a dissenting group of Prince Georges County residents, headed by C. E. Anderson, secretary of the Prince Georges County Chamber of Commerce.

Service Plans Outlined

Under the proposal, the "shuttle" or feeder cars would not be operated between 6:30 and 8:38 a. m., and between 4:45 and 6:30 p. m. During these periods, which company officials called the rush hours, through service would be maintained from the District of Columbia to Riverdale, Branchville and Beltsville, Md.

Dean J. Locke, research engineer for the company, said constant through service would require the company to expend approximately $100,000 for new connecting loops and new cars. He also estimated the cars carried 2,100 persons a day during the nonrush hours.

He maintained that patrons of the line would experience no delay under the proposed plan, since the number of daily trips would be increased from 10 to 12 and connecting cars would be held for transfer passengers.

Opponents Charge Danger

Opponents of the application asserted the volume of business justified through service and that the shuttle plan involved inconvenient transfers, holding "grave and serious elements of danger."

The application heard today replaced a previous application in which the company sought several schedule and service changes, including the shuttle plan. That was withdrawn and only the shuttle proposal retained.

Women Hear Arlington Candidates

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0599.

Attacking Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas for alleged failure to curb speed along Lee boulevard, John Paul Jones, independent candidate for Commonwealth's attorney, told the Organized Women Voters of Arlington County yesterday that excessive speed along the boulevard has been brought to Douglas' attention but nothing has been done to improve conditions.

State funds, he said, are available to straighten Washington boulevard at North Quincy street adjacent to Washington-Lee High School. Jones added that it has been admitted by his opponent that he has not had the time to take legal steps to obtain right of way.

"I pledge, if elected, even though I may differ with the views of the people, I will carry out every wish of the people." He further pledged he would administer the office fearlessly and independently of any party. Douglas was not present.

John Locke Green, Republican candidate for county treasurer, opposing Charles T. Jesse, incumbent, took his opponent to task for continuing to practice law and for holding the office of commissioner of accounts.

Green also referred to Jesse being attorney for the power company, which he said was inconsistent as a public official. "To that I was told it was none of my business." He charged that Jesse put in an expense account for $73 for traveling expenses for himself and deputy to a treasurer's convention at Virginia Beach August 16-20.

A nominating committee to select a slate of officers to be elected at the November meeting was named, including Mrs. Ira N. Galrielson, chairman; Mrs. Dean Rose, Mrs. Lane A. Cricher, Mrs. William Craver, Mrs. H. P. Simpson, Mrs. Virginia Ekstrand, and Mrs. Julian Tapp.

Bryan Sued By Firemen in Montgomery

3 in Volunteer Group Charge False Arrest And Malicious Abuse

The Bethesda Fire Department, Inc., and its president, George W. Bryan, were sued yesterady for false arrest and malicious abuse of process by three members of the volunteer faction who were arrested a month ago for trespassing in the firehouse.

The suits were brought by Samuel T. Robertson, president of the volunteers; Hiram B. Musgrave, former volunteer fire chief, and Robert Fremeau, a member of the volunteer group. Each asked the court for $5,000 damages.

Trespass Charged

The three men were hailed into Police Court on August 28 on warrants sworn to by Bryan, charging trespass. Judge James C. Christopher acquitted Robertson and the charges against the other two men were nolle prossed.

Filed by James H. Pugh, attorney, the complaints against the fire department and Bryan allege the three volunteer firemen were arrested "falsely and maliciously and without any reason or probable cause whatever."

Bargagni Selection Blamed

Agitation between the two groups started several months ago when the Bethesda Fire Board put the volunteer company on a semipaid basis and named A. J. Bargagni, former Washington Fire Department official, as chief.

A number of the volunteers, who supported Musgrove for the post, banded together and organized a rival company. Meetings of the volunteer group have been held in the firehouse.

Pole Wins War Over 'Corridor' In Takoma Park

Takoma Park, Md., was the scene of a miniature Polish-German conflict recently, according to testimony yesterday in police court at Hyattsville.

Casimen Gaciliski, of Polish descent, charged John V. Swengen, his German-descended neighbor, with trespass. Gaciliski testified that Swengen used his driveway to turn his car around.

When he protested, Gaciliski said Swengen replied:

"You know what we did to the Polish Corridor."

After he had sworn out the warrant, Gaciliski said Swengen came to his house to "lay down his peace terms." These, Gaciliski said, were that he should withdraw his warrant and permit Swengen to use the driveway.

Judge Alan Bowie observed that he hadn't heard of a declaration of war in Takoma Park and fined Swengen $10.

Marine Gets Five Years in Bank Holdup

Federal Sentence Given Youth Stationed At Naval Academy

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 27.—Wilbur Russell Davis, 20, United States Marine, was sentenced today to five years in the Federal Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., for the $2,500 holdup of the Annapolis Bank & Trust Co. August 9.

Sentenced was imposed in Federal Court by Judge W. Calvin Chesnut. Davis previously had pleaded guilty to the holdup.

Davis, who had been assigned to the marine detail at the Naval Academy, said little in court except that he had been in financial trouble and "wanted to get out of it."

Maj. Emery E. Larson, Navy football coach and Davis' superior officer, testified that Davis had an excellent record for the past three years.

Davis said he was from Shreveport, La.

In court, and weeping as Judge Chestnut passed sentence, was the marine's young wife. Two weeks before the hold-up, testimony disclosed, she had filed suit for divorce. Part of the loot, it was testified, had been given to her, Davis explaining that it was an inheritance.

Tydings Favors Cash-and-Carry to Replace Embargo

Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, leans toward substitution of the cash-and-carry plan for the present arms embargo, he indicated last night in an address before the Kensington (Md.) Chamber of Commerce. About 350 heard him reiterate this policy, though he declined to say definitely how he intended to vote on embargo repeal.

"I think," said Tydings, "that the surest way for our country to stay out of the present war insofar as we can is to have everything we sell to Germany, France or England paid for in this country before the title to the goods is transferred and that it must be transported in foreign ships."

Alexandria Schools Cancel Adult Woodworking Class

Because only one person appeared Monday for the opening class, the Alexandria, Va., public school system has decided to abandon its proposed adult course in woodworking at George Washington High School, school officials disclosed yesterday.

With co-operation of the vocational education department of the Virginia department of education, the city had planned to offer free adult classes in woodworking and cabinet making. The classes were to be directed by Lewis M. Beres, instructor in the high school manual training department, and the school's machine shops had been made available.

Since funds are available for free adult instruction, school officials hope to work out a course which may be more desirable, Superintendent of Schools T. C. Williams announced.

Lions Told About Crime

Developments in the science of crime detection was the subject of an address by John S. Arnold, captain of the Alexandria Police Department, at the meeting of the Alexandria Lions Club yesterday at the George Mason Hotel.

An estimated 4,750,000 persons are engaged in lawlessness in the United States, Capt. Arnold said, and some type of crime is committed on the average of every 22 seconds. Photography, finger printing and surprisingly accurate lie-detector devices recently have assisted in reducing this record, Capt. Arnold said.

Lions were told they have every right to be proud of the Alexandria Police Department, which, Arnold said, boasts an exceptionally well fitted laboratory for a city of Alexandria's population. Among the devices included in the department's equipment, he said, are modern photographic and finger-printing departments and a modern radio system.

John S. Jackson was appointed by President Marvin Wilson to represent the Alexandria Club at the annual Governor's District Conference in Williamsburg October 6.

State to Ask Indictment in Blaine Death

One of 4 Persons Held in Hit-Run Case to Face Charge, Prosecutor Says

State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., yesterday said he would ask the Prince Georges County grand jury next week to return an indictment for murder or manslaughter against one of four persons held in connection with the death of Mrs. Addie Blaine, 35, estranged wife of an Anacostia painter.

Wheatley said the woman apparently was run over by an automobile after being knocked down in a scuffle. She was found unconscious on River road several blocks from the District line early Sunday and died Monday night at Casualty Hospital.

Three men and a woman who were with Mrs. Blaine the night she was fatally injured were being held at the Hyattsville lockup, while police continued search for another man said to have been with the party.

Police yesterday talked to Percy Blaine, 29, of 1611 Good Hope road southeast, husband of the dead woman, but said he had no connection with the case.

The county grand jury will convene at Upper Marlboro Monday.

Capt. John McEwin, of Baltimore, in charge of the Federal Investigating Bureau of the WPA activities, some weeks ago conducted a hearing with WPA workers and supervisors testifying, and last week conducted a private investigation of WPA projects in the city. Although not officially announced it was learned that McEwin's more recent visit dealt with construction of a retaining wall on a street project where there was reportedly nothing to retain, and building of concrete walls and sidewalks along properties allegedly privately owned. His earlier hearing dealt with dismissal of WPA employes which local sources said were discriminatory and in conflict with WPA principles.

Labor's Non-Partisan League, representing the local Central Labor Union, has taken an active part in urging the investigation of local activities.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

Price Backs $3,846,310 Boost In Virginia School Budget

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Sept. 27.—Governor Price told the budget advisory committee today that his budget for 1940-42 "will be built around the appropriation for public schools." Later he announced to the committee there was "every probability" he could release by December 1 a $250,000 conditional appropriation for the University of Virginia Hospital.

The State department of education requested $3,846,310 per year in additional appropriations for the next biennium. Dr. Sidney B. Hall, state superintendent of public instruction, described the sum as sufficient to raise the pay of the average teacher from $500 to $720 per year.

Dr. John L. Newcomb, president of the University of Virginia, in outlining needs for that institution, asked for an increase of $229,300 the first year and $220,700 the second year, in State appropriations for operation during the next biennium. Capital outlays requested, which included $655,000 for a new living science building, totaled $1,081,500.

It was during the discussion of the university's needs, that the Governor told Dr. Newcomb he believed the conditional appropriation of $250,000 could be released for improvement of the university hospital.

Dr. Hall said the cost of providing free textbooks would be $1.50 per pupil, or $878,643, and the cost of establishing an actuarily sound teachers' retirement system $878,398 per year. For administration, libraries, vocational, industrial and adult education the State board asked $362,428 additional for the first year and $407,428 for the second.

Gov. Price said:

"As I have hitherto told the State board of education, it is my purpose to build this new budget around the public schools. I have asked all the institutions to keep down expenses and capital outlay requests to a minimum. The Federal Government has spent more than $100,000,000 in Virginia, most of it for school buildings, so we must concentrate upon the foundations of a modern system of education."

Dr. S. P. Duke, president of Madison College, Harrisonburg, presented a report outlining a requested appropriation of $119,307, an increase of $24,337. Capital outlay requests included for the first year purchase of real estate $3,500; repairing Reed Hall, $12,000; completion of a new library, $10,000; remodeling interior of Wilson Hall, fourth floor, $5,000, and second year, repairing auditorium seats, $3,000, and repairs to president's home, $2,500.

The report from Mary Washington College, presented by Dr. M. L. Combs, requested $130,000 for operating expenses for the coming biennium, an increase of about 30 per cent over the last appropriation. Capital outlay requests included $35,000 for renovation of Willard Hall, a dormitory, and $10,000 for renovation of Monroe Hall, a classroom building.

Dr. Newcomb said the university of Virginia needed a new office of dean of administration to relieve the president of some of the duties now performed in connection with both this office and that of president. He suggested an appropriation of $10,000 yearly would be needed. Other requests included $30,000 annually for the library, $34,000 the first year and $17,000 the second for buildings and grounds; $40,000 each year for the hospital; $47,600 each year for additions to the teaching staff; $12,500 each year for promotions in the faculty; $15,000 each year for graduate study and research; $40,200 the first year and $48,600 the second for automatic increases in instructors salaries.

Captial outlay requests included: $75,000 for heating tunnel and increase in size of heating mains; $655,000 for a living science building; $150,000 for interne quarters; $150,000 for an addition to the nurses home; $19,000 for an addition to the law building, and $30,000 for placing telephone lines underground.

Dr. Tipton R. Snavely, of Charlottesville, chairman of the Virginia milk commission, submitted a budget for the commission asking $30,880 for the group, an increase of about $7,000, each year, and $30,764 for the local milk control boards.

Jury May Get Steele Slaying Case Today

Brothers Say Victim Abused Mother, Fight Followed

By the Associated Press

Front Royal, Va., Sept. 27.—Three brothers charged with the slaying of Charles H. Steele, 64, testified in Warren Circuit Court today they visited Steele's home June 25 to obtain an apology from the older man for what they said was abusive language he had used in the presence of their mother.

The defendants—Carson, Lloyd and Harry Rinker—denied Carson had used brass knucks in striking Steele, as had been testified earlier in the trial by the slain man's son, Robert, and his daughter, Roberta.

Mrs. Samuel Rinker, widowed mother of the defendants, told the jury today that Steele went to the Rinker home May 27, complained that pigs had trespassed on his property, and used abusive language. She said that later Harry Rinker met Steele in the road and a fight followed.

Two defense witnesses remained to be heard when court was adjourned. The case was expected to go to the jury tomorrow.

Robert Steele, a son, testified yesterday that Carson Rinker knocked his father down and that Harry and Lloyd kicked him in the head and stomach and stamped on his head.

Steele's lower jaw was fractured and there were blood clots on the brain, Coroner D. M. Kipps testified.

State Board Asks Revision of Fruit Inspection Law

Richmond, Va., Sept. 27 (AP).—The State commissioner of agriculture would have more leeway in fixing charges under a recommendation in the State Department of Agriculture's annual report, seeking a change in the present law covering collection of fees for inspection of apples and peaches.

Fees and other charges are authorized under the present law to be fixed at amounts sufficient to pay the cost, making it mandatory that expenditures not exceed revenue.

In support of the recommendation the department said it was not possible to fix the fees from year to year so that revenue would always cover necessary expenditures, and that the present set-up might make it necessary to stop inspection services at a time when it was essential they be continued.

Marylanders to Give Thanks For Increased Turkey Crop

17% Jump in Production Indicated As Marketing Service Forecasts 474,000 Fowls—Or 948,000 Drumsticks

By the Associated Press

College Park, Md., Sept. 27.—A Maryland crop of 474,000 turkeys—and that means 948,000 drumsticks—was forecast today by the agricultural marketing service.

Indications are the crop will be 17 per cent larger than last year and the largest in Maryland since 1937.

The forecast was based on a September 1 survey of 87 flocks, and was in line with the turkey outlook generally in the South Atlantic States, for which a 13 per cent increase over last year was indicated.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor has announced he will proclaim November 23 Thanksgiving Day, in keeping with the date fixed by President Roosevelt to provide a wider spread between that holiday and Christmas.

The marketing service noted, however, that the proportion of the crop to be marketed in November promises to be 3.2 per cent smaller than in November last year, and "consequently, a smaller proportion of the total crop is indicated for marketing prior to Thanksgiving this year, which leaves a somewhat larger proportion for the Christmas market."

The turkey outlook for Maryland this year is well above the 1931-1935 average of 367,000 birds.

For other States in the South Atlantic region the service saw the turkey line-up this way:

Delaware, 118,000; Virginia, 930,000; West Virginia, 274,000; North Carolina, 286,000; South Carolina, 153,000; Georgia, 101,000 and Florida, 109,000.

Archibald Defends Crown Against Jeffra Tonight

Champ Rated 9-5 Choice in Stadium Bout

Gate of $12,000 Predicted for Bout; Benny Leonard to Referee Title Bout

By Shirley Povich.

Inside the 20-foot ring at Griffith Stadium tonight the fistic paths of an erstwhile Providence millhand and a reformed Baltimore caddy—Joey Archibald vs. Henry Jeffra—will converge in battle for the featherweight championship of the world. Odds of 9 to 5 that Archibald's title will not change hands were prevailing last night.

The grinning Archibald and the sober-faced Jeffra applied the final licks to their training for the scheduled 15 rounder in public workouts at Turner's Arena yesterday. There was little more than a nod of recognition between the pair as Archibald quit the ring at the end of his workout while Jeffra climbed through the ropes from an opposite corner.

A recurrent surge of fan interest in the battle following a lull occasioned by the three-weeks' postponement occasioned by Archibald's cut eye, led Promoters Ahearn and Turner to predict a gate in excess of $12,000. A promise of fair and warm weather tonight was greeted joyfully by the team of promoters.

Weigh in at Noon

Champion and challenger will weigh in at noon today at Turner's Arena in ceremonies to be supervised by the District Boxing Commission. The 126-pound featherweight limit has not been among the worries of either fighter, inasmuch as Archibald yesterday scaled 125 pounds, a half pound more than the Baltimorean.

Boxing Commission officials yesterday laughed down the protest of Al Weill, manager of Archibald, who is demanding sole authority in the matter of stopping the fight in the event of a new injury to Archibald's left eye.

"Weill will not even be given a hearing on that score," stated Commission Secretary Heinie Miller. "Benny Leonard meets all the commission requirements as a referee and he will have sole power to decide if either fighter is able to continue. When Archibald and Jeffra signed contracts for the fight they agreed to abide by District commission rules. No exceptions will be made."

Meteoric Career

Archibald's return to a Griffith Stadium ring as a defending champion climaxes a meteoric career for the little Providence fellow who three years ago made his Washington debut in the same ring as a $75 preliminary fighter.

For Jeffra, the title bout will be no new experience. The Baltimorean held the bantamweight championship of the world for two years before outgrowing the division. He won the title by beating Sixto Escobar in a championship fight after twice beating the champion in overweight affairs.

The Archibald camp yesterday was steeped in confidence, inspired chiefly by the cocksureness of the champion himself. "I've fought 'em tougher than Jeffra," said Archibald, "and this looks like just another fight to me. I like that title too

Redskins Lack Old-Time Zip In Practice

Coach Flaherty Berates Team for MissingSignals And Block Assignments

Washington's Redskins were roundly berated yesterday by Head Coach Ray Flaherty following a lackadaisical practice performance at Fairlawn Field. Expressing himself as violently displeased with their showing, Flaherty lashed out at virtually the entire squad.

"It was the worst day in practice since we returned from the Coast," Flaherty told newsmen. "With the game against the Giants only five days away, they were missing signals, muffing blocking assignments and acting as if they were meeting a setup on Sunday."

It was a natural let-down, the Redskin coach hopes. "They were running through these same plays better last week than they are now," said Flaherty, "so it's probably just a mental state. But they'll have to snap out of it starting tomorrow or the Giants will give us an awful whaling."

Conspicuously absent from the Redskins' practice was Andy Farkas, but Flaherty allayed any suspicions that Farkas would not be available for Sunday's game. "He has a slight cold and I didn't want him out in this morning's drizzle," said Flaherty. "He'll be all right for Sunday."

Significantly the major portion of the Redskins' practice was devoted to their passing game which bulks as the chief hope of scoring against the Giants. With little concern at the wet ball, Sammy Baugh and Frank Filchock were getting long and accurate heaves away throughout the morning.

Against the threat of New York field goals by Ken Strong and Ward Cuff, the Redskins have Bo Russell, big tackle from Auburn who has convinced Flaherty that he can place kick with the league's best. "We had Russell in mind when we released Tillie Manton," he said, "and he'll give us our share of field goals.

Redskins officers were stampeded throughout yesterday by ticket buyers, giving further indication that a crowd in excess of 31,000 would see the game Sunday. Tickets are still available, however, Business Manager Jack Espey announced.

Nats Make Last Home Stand With Red Sox Today

The Nats' last appearance of the 1939 season in Griffith Stadium—a double-header with the Boston Red Sox today—has been set aside as a special ladies' day.

Clark Griffith designated the twin bill as a ladies' day affair due to yesterday's rained-out game and the fact that the Nats are not playing tomorrow which is the customary ladies' day game.

Manager Bucky Harris will send Dutch Leonard to the mound against the Red Sox in the opening game in an effort to help Leonard reach his goal of 20 victories. During Leonard's appearance, Harris will bench the rookies and surround the knuckle baller with a team of veterans.

Alex Alexandra will pitch the second game.

Little World Series Game Postponed

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 27 (INS).—The second game of the "little world series" between Rochester and Louisville was postponed today because of rain.

Rochester will send the veteran Si Johnson to the mound in tomorrow night's contest in an attempt to even the series. The American Association playoff winners, behind the four-hit pitching of Leroy Parmelee, shut out the Red Wings, 7 to 0, in the opener last night. Long Jim Weaver will be the Louisville starting pitcher.

Arlington Eleven To Drill Tonight

Coach Joe Perron, of the Arlington Fire Department, No. 1, football team, has called a practice tonight at the firehouse at 7:30. The team, which played as 135-pounders last year and moves up to the 150-pound bracket, opens its campaign October 8 against Warrenton gridders on the Virginia Field. Games with the Firemen may be arranged by calling Mr. Palmer at Chestnut 2863

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Max Waxman, otherwise known in Washington's hard-pinched fistic circles as The Man With Ten Thousand Dollars, broke down and confessed yesterday that he has something besides a mercenary interest in Harry Jeffra.

POVICH

"Jeffra is peanuits," Waxman was saying. "I am in the hotel business, the restaurant business, the whisky business and a few other going concerns. Why should I be bothered by Jeffra except that I like the boy. A gentleman in every respect, nice to his people, and smart. He deserves a shot at Archibald's title."

To give Jeffra the chance at Archibald's title, Mr. Waxman, a large citizen originally hailing from Baltimore, posted $10,000 in cash as a guarantee to Archibald, thus instantly evoking the admiration of Washington fistic figures whose chief weekly concern is raising the 40-cent service charge on fight passes.

Waxman's Chief Interest Is Jack Dempsey

"Why should I?" he asked. "Blaustein knows more about training fighters than I do, and we never have any trouble with Jeffra. I'm the front man for Jeffra, Blaustein does all the work. I get him the fights, even if I have to put up $10,000. If the fight doesn't draw $10,000, we get nothing. But Jeffra won't be fighting for nothing. We'll pay him off."

Waxman is merely dabbling in the fight-managing business in sponsoring Jeffra. His chief interest is Jack Dempsey and the evidence is that they are both getting rich under Waxman's management of the Dempsey enterprises. Waxman was in an expansive mood as he related the Dempsey-Waxman relationship.

"Ever hear of Steele, Mo.? Well, Dempsey's getting $1,500 for refereeing a fight there this week. I never heard of the place either until they asked me to send Dempsey down there and sent a $1,500 check. From there he goes to Eau Claire, Wis., to work one night for $1,200. A couple of nights later, he's picking up $1,500 to work some fights at some kind of a place called East Liverpool, Ohio. It's wonderful."

They haven't even scratched the surface of what is already a profitable whisky business, to hear Waxman tell it. "Dempsey whisky may be a $5,000,000 proposition within a couple of years. Anything with that fellow's name on it will sell. Don't forget, Dempsey never took a drink in his life."

Hotel Business Always Good Insurance

If anything should happen to the Dempsey whisky business, or the two jam-packed Dempsey restaurants in New York, there's always the Waxman-Dempsey hotel business in Miami, the Man With Ten Thousand Dollars was saying. In fact, the Dempsey Vanderbilt Hotel in Miami is the particular pet of Waxman.

"We built it up with our own money. Right now we're adding 75 rooms. We lost money the first year, broke even the second year, made money last year. We figure to take $125,000 out of that hotel next season. The hotel business is wonderful. You know when I began to think it was wonderful?"

We didn't even suspect when Waxman first got the idea that the hotel business was so remarkable, so he confided:

"I took a couple of friends into the bar of our hotel the first season we opened it and ordered a round of drinks. Naturally, I didn't want to put it on the cuff, so I picked up the check myself. The check was for $7.50. That's when I decided the hotel business was wonderful."

Dempsey Business 'Doing All Right'

Back in 1929, neither Waxman nor Dempsey were exceedingly affluent. The big money that Waxman had made as manager of Welterweight Champion Joe Dundee had vanished and Dempsey had saved little from his own fight purses. Waxman was on tour with Dundee and Dempsey was trying to get a foothold as a promoter in Chicago.

"That's when a rather nice friendship started between us," said Waxman. "Dempsey wanted me to put Dundee in his club and I said okay. He wanted me to sign contracts and I told him to forget it, I wouldn't let him down. I could have gotten Dundee $7,500 from another Chicago promoter, but I went into Dempsey's club for a percentage and made only $5,600.

"Jack said he appreciated that, and told me he wouldn't forget it. A couple of months later he called me by telephone and said he wanted me to be his business manager and did I want the job. Who wouldn't want to be Dempsey's manager? Anybody who couldn't make money with Dempsey and plenty of it deserves to starve.

"Since I've been managing Dempsey, I've learned what a remarkable fellow he is. He never reads a book, or even newspapers, but he's got poise and manners and character. People just naturally like him and that's why we do all right."

Huskies in Last Hard Drill For Game With Pitt Saturday

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Sept. 27.—The University of Washington Huskies took their last hard drill today before tapering off for their intersectional football game here Saturday with the Pittsburgh Panthers.

The Huskies again drilled against a "knothead" eleven which featured Pitt plays and defenses.

Chicago Crumbles In Daylight-Dark Double-Header

By International News Service

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Bobby Feller weakened after seven strenuous innings at Comiskey tonight, but lasted long enough to chalk up his twenty-third victory as the Cleveland Indians whipped the White Sox, 7 to 5, to make a clean sweep of an after-noon-and-night doubleheader.

The Indians took the afternoon game 5 to 2 and, with their victory tonight, went into third place half a game ahead of the Sox.

Feller blanked the Sox with one hit for six innings while his mates were making four runs off Southpaw Edgar Smith. But two singles, a walk, and Larry Rosenthal's inside-the-park homer gave Chicago three runs and made the count 4-3 in the seventh.

Hal Trosky batted for Feller in the eighth and doubled to lanuch a three-run rally against Clint Brown that put the game on ice. Mel Harder, although nicked for two runs in the eighth, protected the lead in the ninth.

Brown's appearance was his sixtieth of the year, setting a new big league record for incomplete games. The former record was set by Garland Braxton, of Washington, in 1927.

In the afternoon setto, the Indians chased White Sox Pitcher Long John Rigney in the fifth inning after he had yielded up to the time of his departure seven hits and six walks and had let loose a wild pitch.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Sept. 27.—Al Weill, 249-pound manager of Lou Ambers and Joey Archibald, lightweight and featherweight champions of the world, finished training yesterday for one of the great battles of his famed career as a vicarious battler. He looked in shape—the shape of a thoroughbred squash.

CONSIDINE

"I'm ready to fight Harry Jeffra in Washington," Weill declared, packing an extra stainless steel vest in preparation for his visit to the Capital, where Archibald defends his title tomorrow night against Jeffra, the country's third title fight in a week. "I had a cut eye down there a couple of weeks ago, and they had to postpone. But I'm all right now and ready to go." So, we understand, is Archibald—whose only job will be to do the actual fighting. It was Archibald, we might explain, who really had the cut eye.

"I like this fight," Weill enthused. "For one thing I don't have to count the house and take my mind off the scrap. The dough is in already. Here's the way I work it. Max Waxman—he manages Jeffra—guarantees me ten grand to put my title on the line. He takes the whole 60 per cent of the net which the promoter is paying for the main event, and even if it don't come to ten grand he still has to pay me that much for fighting Jeffra."

'Waxman Will Have to Pay to Lose'

We thought that was a pretty hard thing to do to a sensative character like Waxman.

"The funny part is that I'll beat Jeffra and Waxman will have to pay just to see me win," Al chuckled, contentendly. "There ain't nothing unusual about our arrangement. I would have fought Pete Scalzo if Pete Reilly had put up ten grand. It makes no difference to me. I don't draw no lines. Just put up the ten grand. The same thing was done a couple of years ago down in Washington. Jimmy Erwin put up ten grand and Reilly took Freddy Miller down there. Except that time Miller blew the duke and Erwin won the title." It might be put in here that Erwin was aided a trifle in his titantic task by Petey Sarron, who did the fighting.

"That's the chance I'm taking," Weill cautioned. "This Jeffra is a good kid. Won his last three bouts, easy. He's got an awful hard right, but I'll win. In fact I might feel so good after winning that I'll take Waxman aside and tell him he don't have to pay me the full ten. That is, a course, if I win. If I lose, that's different."

Weill has a lot of work planned for his college-bred featherweight. "But I doubt if I ever fight in Venezuela again," the portly manager moaned. "I dropped a duke to this fellow Chavez down there. Besides, your buck takes a terrible licking down there. An American buck gets you only 60 cents in their dough. I'll have to get a very good offer to fight there again," he promised. Weill, you won't be surprised to learn, didn't make the trip to Venezuela with Archibald.

Al recognizes one great novelty attached to his battle with Jeffra, by way of Archibald. It is the first prominent fight in a long time that hasn't been waged under the auspices of Michael Strauss Jacobs. "The

Fiddler McGee Allows 4 Hits; Walters Defeated

Scrapping 'Gas House Gang,' With Only Four Tilts to Play, Only 2½ Games Behind; Two Teams Meet in Crucial Test Today

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 27.—Fiddler Bill McGee stopped the Reds cold today, beating the leaders 4-0 on four scattered hits, and as a result, the scrapping St. Louis Cardinals retained their slim chance of winning the National League flag.

With four games remaining to be played by each team, including the final of their present "crucial" series tomorrow, the Rhinelanders led by two and one-half contests. They still had a chance to clinch the pennant tomorrow, but their failure to hit in their last two games has thrown this town into a tailspin.

To make matters darker, the man the Cards licked today was heroic Bucky Walters, who had won 27 victories, including his last six in a row. The Gashousers made the most of their seven hits, one of which was Terry Moore's sixteenth home run of the season.

More than 25,000 fans burned almost silently as the Fiddler did his stuff. The young right-hander with the blazing fast ball was in rare form. Two of the four widely scattered blows he permitted were scratched through the infield, Walters contributing one of them.

Only once did the Reds threaten to score on him, in the third inning when an error by Stu Martin on a perfect double-play ball helped the locals fill the bags with two out. Then Bill bore down and made Frank McCormick pop weakly to short.

24 Scoreless Innings

Going back to the first game of yesterday's double-header, when Bill Myers poked a home run with two on, the Reds had piled up 24 consecutive scoreless innings, and the end did not appear to be in sight as McGee fanned Wally Berger for the final out today.

Berger, incidentally, came closest to ending the drought in the fourth inning today, when he knocked one over the leftfield wall that barely went foul. Otherwise, the leaders hit only two really hard balls to the outfield.

The Cards lost little time sailing into Walters. Clean singles by Joe Medwick, Terry Moore and Stu Martin pushed across the winning run in the second frame. They counted twice more in the fourth on a walk to Mize, Don Padgett's line double to right, an error by Ernie Lombardi and a sacrifice fly, Moore's homer, his second safety of the game, rounded off the total.

Slaughter Star Afield

Slaughter provided the fielding gem in the ninth when, after McCormick had led off with a single and the crowd was yelling for a rally, he raced to the rightfield bleachers to pull down Lombardi's drive. With that, the fans subsided.

Manager Bill McKechnie said he would pin his hopes on big Paul Derringer, winner of 24 games, to provide the clincher tomorrow.

Victor Scores With Putt On 18th Hole

Other Favorites Advance as Body In First Round; Maury Nee Triumphs

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

E. L. Bono and E. A. Merkle took turns dropping long putts on the eighteenth green at Columbia yesterday, but Merkle's meant the most and he turned in the only upset in the first round match play of the club championship, a 1 up victory over the former.

Merkle was dormie 1 up, and they were both in front of the eighteenth green in two. Bono chipped way past the pin to the back edge of the green, while Merkle approached some 15 feet short. Bono proceeded to drop his putt for a 4, and Merkle followed suit from a shorter distance for a par 4 and the match.

Otherwise the favorites advanced as a body. Medalist Don Buckingham won 4 and 3 over George Ferris, while Martin F. McCarthy, finalist and Beaver Dam Club champion last year, scored over Billy Shannon by a like margin.

Maury Nee waited until the eighteenth hole to drop Page Cornwell by a 2 up margin while the other final hole victory went to Craig McKee, over R. H. Pickford. Luther Steward, jr., and George Miller lived up to their favorite's roles, while in a toss-up match R. O. Swearingen beat Don Kneesi, 4 and 3.

Today's feature and probably the best match of the tournament brings together McCarthy and Nee battling for a semifinal berth. Nee, Hoya grid star from '35 to '37, has been practicing and playing more of late, and is near his form of three years ago, while McCarthy owns the moniker of 'iron man," and will probably live up to it.

Gen. Malin Craig, recently retired as chief of staff of the U. S. Army, lost on the nineteenth hole of a fourth flight encounter with R. W. McCreery.

Billy Dettweiler's 73 Wins Medal in Congressional Play

Billy Shea Only One Stroke Behind As Golfers Conclude Qualifying Rounds

Qualifying in the Congressional Club Championship was concluded yesterday with Billy Dettweiler's first day 73 standing up for medal honors by a single stroke over the last minute challenge of his former Georgetown golf teammate, Billy Shea. The latter was out in 39, two over par, and back in 35 for the runner-up score.

M. Parker Nolan, one of the favored players to suceed Claude Rippy, now a member of another club, gained a place in the championship flight in a playoff. Nolan, William Wenzel and Johnny Vandergrift, jr., tied with 84's, and after Nolan and Vandergrift halved the ninteenth hole in fives, the latter parred the second to win the place. Wenzel had six on the first hole.

The upper half of the first sixteen is stocked with a majority of the top-notch players, with first round matches bringing together Dettweilere and Nolan and Gene Pittman and Frank Goodwin, District amateur finalist in 1938. Earl McAleer, betting favorite for the title, plays Pat Flaherty and Shea meets W. W. Jones.

The first round of match play is scheduled tomorrow, the second Saturday and the semi-finals and finals on Sunday.

Pony Events Included in K. C. Show

Five-foot fences and most of the East's best hunters will not be the only features of the Columbus Horse Show, which will be staged at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club Saturday and Sunday.

In addition to the best crop of horses that Secretary Viccent P. Lester could gathre together, there will also be a likely group of ponies and young fry from the District, Maryland and Virginia. Tops among these is Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's littlep owerhouse, Victorian II, which will be ridden by 9-year-old Jack Lee Payne in the Saturday morning clases of the show. At the Washington event early this season, Victorian jumped off at 4 feet, which is just three inches taller than the pony stands. He is known throughout Virginia for his remarkable jumping form that has more bounce than a bad check, and his presenece is a definite challenge to other bantamweight exhibitors in the open jumping field.

Other panies will be Tommy Dowell's Cherry Red and Miss Mildred F. Gaines' Dandy Jim, both from Warrenton, Va.; Dean Rathbun, jr.'s Chit-Chat; George Rexrode, jr.'s Iron Duke, Iron Duchess, Good News and Pay Day, and David Belding's Star Boy, Star Girl and Star Way.

The programs for the show, which went to press yesterday, contain several added classes, including an event for model hunters to be shown in hand, hunt teams of three, over the outside course, and a working hunters class, to be ridden by members of the oPtomac, Howard County, Manor or Redland hunt clubs, with a big silver challenge trophy going to the hunt represented by the winning rider.

With the hunter classes well filled and the jumper classes certain of keen competiton friom such stars as Fred Hughes' Black Caddy, Howard Butz's Hobo, Mr. and Mrs. Haggin Perry's Santa Claus, U. S. Randle's Randle Way, and Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, Secretary Lester apparently has nothing to worry about except the weather.

George Messing And Mrs. Lacey Win Low Net

Mrs. Meekly and Quinter Take LowGross in Mixed Foursome Tourney

The Manor Club combination of Mrs. H. L. Lacey and George Messing captured first low net in the annual mixed Scotch foursome tournament of the District Golf Association yesterday at Kenwood, with an 87 gross, 18 handicap, for a net 69. Low gross went to Mrs. Betty P. Meckley, Indian Spring, and Ralph Quinter, jr., Chevy Chase, with nines of 37 and 39, for a 76, a 3-stroke margin over the field.

Inclement weather limited the starters to 29 teams.

Three teams tied for second low gross, all with 79, including Mrs. Ellen Harris and Doug Mattison, Beaver Dam; Mrs. K. S. Giles and W. A. Covert, Indian Spring, and Mrs. Walter Stokes, Indian Spring, and Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vaile, of the host club, won second low net with 80-10, 70, a score tied by the Giles-Covert team, but they preferred a low gross award. Ann Reh and George Bailey, Washington, figured among the net prize winners with 86-16, 71.

Mrs. Meckley and Quinter played the out nine in 37, two over men's part, with a 6 on the fifth hole, and after parring the tenth, ran into trouble with five straight bogeys. But Quinter pulled them out of the skids by dropping a 60-footer for a birdie on the sixteenth, the ball hitting the cup with a bang and staying in, and they parred the last two for the 76.

Mrs. H. L. Lacey and George Messing (Manor), 87, 18—69; Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Valle (Kenwiod)) 80, 10—70; Mrs. K. S. Giles and Walter A. Covert (Indian Spring), 79, 9—70; Ann Reh and G. H. Bailey, jr. Yank Class in Infield Boosts World Series Odds Over Reds

Champions Never Guilty of Long Lapses; Dahlgren, Gordon Are Brightest Stars

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 27.—Sometimes the Cincinnati Reds' infield is torrid and sometimes it's horrid, but there never is a day that the World Champion Yonkees' first line of defense isn't the best in baseball.

It's the Maginot Line of the diamond and the margin of New York's superiority in the World Series opening at Yankee Stadium next Wednesday.

There is a familiar face missing as the champions coast into their fourth consecuitve series—Lou Gehrig, the Iron Horse, rusted and retired. But his unfortunate passing from the picture last spring only served to strengthen the team's defensive play.

Right Side Impregnable

Babe Dahlgren is performing plays around first base that the great Gehrig never even imagined and, with young Joe Gordon at second, gives the Yankees the spryest, tightest right side they ever have had.

Sluggers like Gehrig in his prime don't bloom twice in one season, or several seasons, but Dahlgren nevertheless is a threat at the plate. He has hit 15 home runs and batted in 88 tallies—enough to carry his weight in anybody's batting order.

Gordon is the miracle man of the Yanks' defense—the comer tabbed as potentially greater than Charley Gehringer. He can go in any direction and on one play may take a fly in short right and the next spear a hopping grounder back of second. If it's a popup anywhere within commuting distance for Gordon the rest of the boys let him take it. He never misses.

The left side is nearly as stout and on any basis of consideration, far in front of the foe.

Crosetti Redeemed Errors

Frank Crosetti, whose only fielding weakness is overanxiety, has made only 24 errors at shortstop all season and canceled most of them with a double play in the same inning. Red Rolfe has been even more impregnable in the hot corner. By all measurements the outstanding third baseman of the year, he has fielded .961 and ranked among the American League's leading hitters.

He was the only player in the majors to get more than 200 hits prior to this week and bolstered his .329 batting average with 14 home runs and 46 doubles. Gordon, batting .282, has hit 26 homers, and Crosetti, having his worst hitting year at .232, has blasted 10.

The Reds' infield at its best will give the Yanks or any other team plenty of grievances. The figures, which never are supposed to lie, will even show advantages for Cincinnati here and there. But the Reds sometimes blow and the champions never do.

For a span of 22 games in July, for instance, Shortstop Bill Myers of Cincinnati accepted 141 chances without a single error. But in the middle of September, with the Reds striving to stand off St. Louis, he committed eight blunders in four days and Cincinnati collectively came up with nine miscues in one Sunday double-header.

Frank McCormick at first base is having a great year both at bat and in the field. He has made only seven errors all season, taken part in 146 double plays, and, batting cleanup with a .328 mark, has led the National League in runs batted in.

Lonnie Frey has proved an unsuspected jewel at second, steadying the infield and batting in the neighborhood of .300, but he doesn't cover ground with Gordon. Aside from the improvement in the play of Frey and Myers this season, the difference in the Cincinnati infield this year and last, when it kept the Reds rom championship contention, is Bill Werber. Acquired from the Philadelphia Athletics last spring, he has had his best year in the hot corner, and is easily the best leadoff man in the National League.

St. Louis has one of the most uncertain infields in the league and during most of the sesaon has been last in fielding. But the Cards have a private theory on errors—make as many as you want so long as they don't lead to runs. If they do, get them back at the plate. They've done right well at this.

featherweight division is the division Mike isn't boss of," Al pointed out. "I guess you'd say, too, that he isn't in on the bantam title neither. He is, really, but Lew Brix (manager of Bantam Champ Sixto Escobar) won't fight unless in his backyard in Puerto Rico. I guess you'd say, also, that Mike don't control the flyweight division either but the main reason for that is they ain't any flyweight division any more. They don't even have a champ.

"Mike lost the featherweight division when Armstrong gave up the title." Weill amplified. "The New York commission then ordered me to fight Belloise. You see I had come along fast. They barred me in Providence for throwing a lefthanded uppercut, so I went to Washington, win nine dukes, get reinstated again and got the title shot against Belloise. What? Oh, sure, I mean Archibald. Well, I beat Belloise, ten rounds in Washington and 15 at the St. Nick's, and then I beat Rodak in Providence and both the N. B. A. and the New York commission recognized me. They named Scalza the number one challenger, and I would've fought him, instead of Jeffra, if Reilly had gotten up the ten. Anyway, Mike Jacobs lost control when Armstrong give up, but I guess he ain't so sad because he's got the heavyweight, light-heavyweight, middleweight, welterweight and lightweight titles."

Al believes that his toe-to-toe brawl with Jeffra will draw in the neighborhood of $15,000. Benny Leonard, one of the most perfect fighting machines in pugilistic history, will be the third man in the ring. So Al, one of the few in fight annals to hold two vicarious titles, will feel perfectly at home when he goes out to do battle with Jeffra, via Archibald.

C. U. Entrains for South Carolina Game Tomorrow Night

Georgetown' Holds Huge Rally Tonight

Hoyas Off Tomorrow For Temple Game; Maryland Awaits Hampden-Sydney Tilt

By Jack Munhall.

The first of two District college football teams faced with unusually strong opening-game opposition on foreign fronts this week-end left last night when a squad of 34 Catholic University players entrained for Columbia, S. C., and its Friday night engagement with the University of South Carolina.

Tomorrow afternoon, following one of the wildest pep rallies in recent years scheduled at the Hilltop tonight, Georgetown's eleven will depart for Philadelphia to fulfill a Friday night date with Temple in the Owls' new stadium.

Meanwhile the University of Maryland is ironing out the last wrinkles in its attack preparatory to meeting the invasion of Hampden-Sydney at College Park Saturday and George Washington is marking time to watch carefully Georgetown's showing against Temple. With an eye to the G. U.-G. W. game October 28, Line Coach Botchey Kock and perhaps Head Coach Bill Reinhart, too, will scout the Hoyas.

Tough Opening Game

Catholic University, with reason to believe the current team is its best since the 1936 Orange Bowl champions, regards the South Carolina game its toughest opener in many years. Much more significance is attached to this first test than to the ordinary opener against a "breather" because of the youth of the Cardinal squad. Often a young team is "made" or broken by the results of its first game.

The truth of this theory was driven home forcibly to Georgetown in 1937 when a promising but untried young Hoya team traveled to meet Holy Cross early in the season and received a trouncing it never forgot.

Despite the fact that South Carolina dropped a 18-7 decision to Wake Forest Saturday in its first start, Catholic University was heartened but little, for Wake Forest reputedly has one of the greatest teams in the South and secondly because the Gamecocks have especially pointed for the C. U. game which is their homecoming.

Well-Balanced Team

However, Catholic University is ready with a well-balanced team whose only apparent weakness in pre-season practice was the lack of a dependable forward passer. Its line is the typica lheavy, aggressive forward wall that Fod Cotton develops each year. Its backfield is versatile and speed and offers two fine runners in Charlie Moutenot and Joe Guyon, both of whom have apparently recovered their 1937 form after missing much of last season with injury and illness, respectively.

Guyon has been having but negligible trouble with the stomach ailment which is attributed as the cause of his disappointing play in 1938 and Moutenot is running as of old on the knee which he hurt midway last season and subsequently was forced to quit the team.

More than 1,000 students and alumni are expected to congregate around the north porch at Georgetown at 6:30 this evening for a mammoth football pep rally. Head Coach Jack Hagerty and Faculty Director of Athletics John J. Kehoe, S. J., will address the gathering.

Hoya's Mascot

Another attraction will be the introduction of Georgetown's first official football mascot in several years, a full-blooded Boston bulldog named "Little Hoya."

"Little Hoya" was presented to Georgetown by the New Jersey Alumni Chapter and is successor to "Hoya," the original bulldog mascot of several years ago.

Reports from Philadelphia yesterday presaged a crowd of between 30,000 and 35,000 fans for the Georgetown-Temple game which would be the largest throng to see an early-season college game in the Quaker City in recent years.

At least 2,000 of the crowd will be Georgetown rooters—student, alumni and friends—who will accompany the team on a special train, togehter with the 60-piece Georgetown band.

This football special will leave Union Station tomorrow afternoon at 4:15 and return from the North Philadelphia Station Saturday at 1:50 a. m. The round trip price is $5.00.

The G. U. squad worked out under the lights at Griffith Stadium again last night and will taper off with a light workout at the Hilltop today.

Coach Hagerty will be interviewed over station WMAL at 6 o'clock this evening. He will discuss prospects for the Temple game.

St. James Eleven Opens Saturday

Hagerstown, Sept. 27.—St. James School will open its football season at home Saturday, when it meets the Boys Latin School team, of Baltimore. The remainder of the schedule follows:

October 13, Landon School, at Washington; October 21, West Nottingham, at home; November 4, St. Paul's School, at Baltimore; November 11, Friends School, Baltimore, at home; November 18, Hagerstown High, at Hagerstown; November 22, St. Albans School, at Washington.

Roanoke College Gridders Charge the Line

Though beaten decisively in its first start of the season, the Roanoke College football line shown above is expected to improve with leaps and bounds as the rough edges of inexperience and insufficient weight are overcome. The charging gridmen are Clyde Gillespie, Al Wilson, Rodney Lester, Ed Foster, Ed Goodwin, Sam Yeager and Dave Findley. The lower shot shows Goodwin, captain of the team, crouching ready for action. Roanoke meets Georgetown here on October 7

Grid Contest Fans Puzzled By Nebraska-Indiana Game

The Cornhuskers of Nebraska and the Hoosiers of Indiana are providing Washington Post football fans with the most puzzling game on Saturday's schedule. Rarely is one of the teams being picked to win my more than a single touchdown, and a good share of contesnt entrants are actually predicting a tie.

It isn't necessary to pick the scores—merely the winners. The rules are few and simple. Merely check the winners, mail your entry to "The Football Contest Editor" of The Post before the deadline, and await results.

To each of the five winning contestants, The Post will present a pair of choice tickets to the first college double-header football attraction in Griffith Stadium history—the Georgetown-Roanoke and George Washington-Davis Elkins games scheduled for Saturday, October 7.

Roanoke and Concord To Clash Saturday

Maroons Hope to Redeem Themselves In Night Game at Salem; Only One Injury Received in V. M. I. Contest

Special Dispatch to The Post

Salem, Va., Sept. 27.—After two successive defeats at the hands of Lenoir Rhyne and Virginia Military Institute, Roanoke College's Maroons set out to redeem themselves this week-end against Concord's Mountain Lions.

Coach Jim Callaghan's Lions come to Salem Saturday night for a contest on College Field, beginning at 8 o'clock.

With the Maroons considerably weaker than when they administered a 26-13 licking to the Lions last year and the West Virginians reported somewhat stronger, indications point toward a close battle under the arcs.

Only One Casualty

Roanoke came through the V. M. I. rock crusher with but one serious casualty, a strained ligament in the leg of Rodney Lester, Christiansburg senior and regular guard. It is still problematical whether Lester will be ready for Concord, the team physician said today.

Talking over the 41-0 loss to V. M. I., Head Coach Gordon (Pop) White turned ahead to this week's game:

"I dont' know what Concord's got," he said. "We have a non-scouting agreement with them but I know King only beat them 3 to 0 last Saturday and that they have a squad of 34 men. But I still say the game is a toss-up. We've got a 50-50 chance to win."

Camarra Returns

The return of Louis Camarra, promising sophomore back who has been out since the season opened as a precaution against a slight concussion, lent a ray of hope in the Maroon camp this week. Camarra is the nearest approach to a triple-threater the locals have, and he will surely see action against Concord.

Captain Sam Bowers, 6-foot 3-inch flankman, leads the Lions from "on high," while Concord also has a 6-foot 5-inch tackle she will throw up against the Maroon's offense. Concord's offense is built around a light but fast and crafty backfield.

Archibald Faces Jeffra At Stadium

Joey Favored at Odds Of 9-5 to Retain Title In FeatherBout Tonight

much to kiss it off with a bad fight."

Grimness was the keynote of the Jeffra entourage. The soft-spoken Baltimore lad took orders from his trainer, Heinie Balustein, and had little to say save to remark: "I want that title."

Archibald's perpetual-motion style of attack and his punching ability are responsible for the pronounced odds in his favor. The Rhode Islander has won most of his Washington appearences by knockouts and has been knocked out only once since he became a headliner.

Jeffra's camp followers pointed out, however, that Archibald has been idle for nearly four months in contrast to the steady diet of fights in which Jeffra has figured. "That bout with Baby Yak in Washington two weeks ago was just the thing Jeffra needed to tighten him for this fight," said Trainer Balustein.

Parade of Headliners

A sharpshooter with both hands in contrast to Archibald's wild-punching style, Jeffra is expected to lose little time in shooting his left hand to Jeffra's recently headed left eye. He does not carry the punch of Archibald, but he has always been rated a superb defensive fighter.

A parade of former headline fighters will precede Champion Joe Archibald and Challenger Harry Jeffra into the ring at Griffith Stadium tonight in pre-fight ceremonies.

First to be introduced will be Benny Leonard, retired undefeated lightweight champion, who will referee the bout.

Among the group will be Kid Williams, fistic pride of Baltimore who formerly held the featherweight crown; Joe Dundee, Baltimore's former welterweight champion of the world; Vince Dundee, former middleweight titleholder, and the renowned Chaneys of Baltimore—Andy and George Kayo—who were leading contenders in the lighter classes.

THE COMPLETE PROGRAM

(First bout at 8:30 p. m.)

First bout (126 pounds)—Billy Banks (Washington) vs. Jimmy Troublefield (Richmond).

Second bout (126 pounds)—Buster Miller (Washington) vs. Jimmy Collins (Baltimore).

Fourth bout (145 pounds)—Phil Furr (Washington) vs. Joey Spangler (Washington).

Semifinal (126 pounds)—Spider Armstrong (Toronto) vs. Marcus Pitts (Washington).

Yanks End Season With 3 Twin Bills

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—New York Yankee officials said today the American League champions would wind up their 1939 season with three doubleheaders in Yankee Stadium.

They will face the Athletics in a twin bill tomorrow, take Friday off, and then wind up against the Red Sox in a four-game series Saturday and Sunday.

The two-day Sox doubleheader was necessitated when rain postponed games scheduled for Boston yesterday and today.

Northwestern Coach Fears Effect of Excess Publicity

Lynn Waldorf Expects Every Foe on Schedule To Shoot Works Against 'Cats

By the Associated Press

Evanston, Ill., Sept. 27.—You probably have already heard that Northwestern willl have one of the Nation's toughest football teams this fall. Head Coach Lynn Waldorf would be the last man to deny it.

Graying, candid Waldorf goes to football's wailing wall about as seldom as any coach in the business, but he doesn't need anyone to tell him his Wildcats are on spot.

Sophs Stand Out

Northwestern has what it takes to go to town this season—manpower and experience, backed by some fine-looking sophomores, including the publicity-flooded Bill de Correvont, who practically rewrote the prep school scoring book as a Chicago High School star two years ago.

"Yes, we should be stronger this year than last," admits Waldorf. "But that isn't saying we'll win more games. Our prospects are bright from the standpoint of experience and power, but we are in a bad spot from a psychological angle.

Publicity May Hurt

"The fact that Northwestern as a whole and De Correvont in particular have received so much publicity will make all our opponents shoot the works at us. And we have eight tough ones in a row, starting with Oklahoma. I think all the publicity will cost us at least two games."

Hahnenstein, Soper and Madsen are three of the 23 lettermen returning this fall. These veterans are so distributed that Waldorf has two lettermen for every position except right tackle.

Jockey Francis Kelly, Of Baltimore, Gives Winner Brilliant Ride; Double Pays $84.80

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 27.—Shouldering the top impost of 118 pounds, Abrasion, a son of Canter, in the colors of J. W. Y. Martin, drove to the wire to win a photo decision from T. D. Buhl's Domkin in the Glen Burnie Purse, a race for Maryland-bred 2-year-olds at 6 furlongs here today. Ral Parr's Son Altesse, operating in the role of the favorite, was third in the field of eight.

Jockey Francis Kelly, Baltimore boy, put up a brilliant ride on Abrasion but Apprentice E. Mower shared riding honors even in defeat. It was one of those finishes that found both boys and horses giving all they had and it was anybody's decision in most books until the picture was developed.

Domkin, claimed last spring by Owner Buhl for $1,500, showed the speed that has made him a feared colt by taking command in the opening jumps and drawing out. Praetor and Son Altesse attempted to run with the Ladkin colt but could not get to him.

A four-way blanket finish marked the fifth race and proved a victory for Knoxville and Jockey Johnny Gilbert.

The "7 and 8" combination of Maechance, a $10.10 proposition, paid $84.80 in the daily double.

LOTTERY, taken under restraint in early stages and squeezed back while attempting to improve position approaching stretch, came with rush when clear and just missed getting up. BALAPIN came from far back with belated rush. HUNTING HOME, forwardly placed from beginning, came willingly when placed to hard drive and then hung.

KINGSEM quit badly after showing early speed.

At The Post

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 27.

Dear Al:

Challedon will see action here on Saturday. W. L. Brann's ace took the track this morning and stepped a mile 1:42 3-5, ending rumors that he had a bad knee. Trainer Lou Schaefer was all smiles after the workout. The Western Maryland Express meets good opposition in the $15,000 added Havre de Grace Handicap. Owner C. S. Howard has wired that Sorteado, his stablemate of Kayak II, will be in the field. With Eight Thirty definitely on the shelf with a filled leg, Jockey Harry Richards will not have to ride for George D. Widener which means he will have the leg up on Challedon. The Bel Air stud's Isolator is another stated to seek the big Saturday purse. I rode up to the track this morning with Art Brown, WOL gum-beater, and he went so fast that you would have thought he was trying to see the finish of yesterday's last race. Chris Wood, jr., turf commentator, leaves tomorrow for Camden, S. C., to play over the new Kirkwood golf course. Sometimes wish I could get away from it all like that. Jimmy Loftus is on a diet. He went for three rounds yesterday and George Mike went for three bucks. Clocker Mike, incidentally, says that he has called off plans for his wedding. He gave his girl a buck to buy a pack of cigarettes for him and she didn't come back. Edgar Horn, editor of the Turf and Sport Digest, has been re-elected president of the Maryland Racing Writers. George Snow, of the Racing Form, and Humphrey Finney, of the Maryland Horse, were retained as vice president and secretary respectively. Now for the winners.

BILL.

First race—Miss Idle ran good races in New England but failed to show her usual speed in a lone Havre outing. We'll string along again. Aerial Star set the pace in his last but stopped. May last today. Hide closed fast after a slow beginning to beat Aerial Star and should be right there.

Second race—Sack falls into a good spot in this affair, meeting youngsters who have been repeatedly beaten in cheaper company. Is dropping down after a good effort behind Colosseum. Nicky looms as the contender. Finished second to Bright View last start. Brazen Hussy had poor form in New York but may do better here.

Third race—Morstep, outran by Court Dance last week, is placed in a slightly cheaper field. Has the edge in open race. Prairie Dog will be the one to beat on the merits of a fair showing in the Susquehanna Handicap opening day. Dizzy Dame is improving rapidly and figures next in line.

Fourth race—Cardell stands out as the best bet in this allowance event. Third to Victory Morn in the Eastern Shore despite early interference, he should have little trouble scoring over this company. Rawson finished behind the top horse in that race, and gets the call over the others. Barre Granite for show.

Fifth race—Merry Gesture, down from New England, where she sprinted consistently with the better grade allowance performers, gets the call in the feature. Dr. Whinny has had early foot in route races and receives a good figure from his trials at this track. Montsin may be up in the final strides for the show award.

Sixth race—Scout About was a fair sort this summer in New York, but raced poorly when competing against mediocre company last week. Doesn't meet much here and may score at a price. Eliacaw is a slow beginner that can made trouble in the stretch run. Dinamita has early foot and may last with these cheap ones.

Seventh race—Blond Spook has been knocking on the door in New York, running in fast time. Should capture the nightcap with Johnny Gilbert doing the riding. New Deal won his last race at Narragansett, beating Mahlette. He is in form and gets the call for second place over Ewin Booth.

Best bet—Cardell.

Horses to Watch At Havre de Grace

ESCOHIGH—Lee O'Donnell has this one as sharp as a razor and will take down first money in a sprint.

BILL FARNSWORTH—As honest as they come. Had trouble in that recent effort. Should make amends in his next start.

JOE SCHENCK—A good sprinter who has been going well in morning trials. Don't let this one get away.

PONEMAH—A good Maryland bred that will make every post a winning one when placed in the right spot.

FICTITIOUS—W. L. Brann's colorbearer made the clockers sit up and take notice the other morning when he was caught in 1:42 3-5 for a mile.

Wheat Eases Moderately in Erratic Trade

Peace Moves, Absence Of Export Demand Are Factors

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Wheat prices lost as much as a cent a bushel today in erratic trade that closed at or near the session's lows.

Small opening gains were replaced by net losses ranging to ¾ cent, but the early decline reflected lack of buying interest rather than selling pressure. A moderate, late rally lifted prices to near the previous close, but they backed down again in the final minutes.

Peace moves abroad, absence of export demand and estimates of a record world carryover restricted trade. The U. S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics anticipated domestic wheat carryover next July would total about 225,000,000 bushels.

Wheat closed ⅜ to 1 cent lower, December, 85⅛@85¼; May, 85¾@85⅝. Corn, 1 to 1⅜ down, December, 53¼@53⅛; May, 56. Oats, ⅛ to ⅜ off. Soy beans, ¼ to ⅝ up. Rye, ⅛ to ½ higher. Lard, 10 to 15 lower.

Other North American wheat markets also closed lower. Kansas City was ¼ to ⅝ down, Minneapolis, ¼ to ⅝ off, and Winnipeg, ⅜ to ⅝ off.

Rye again displayed independent strength, and at one time was up 1⅛ cents. Buying was stimulated by dry weather reports and by reports of foreign inquiry for the grain.

Oats declined in a light trade.

Food Shortage Here Unlikely, Says Chester

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Colby M. Chester, chairman, General Foods Corp., said today there is no likelihood of a food shortage nor justification for unreasonable food prices in the United States as a result of the European war. He based his conclusions upon a nationwide survey made by his company.

Less than eight per cent of U. S. food consumed comes from abroad, he said, and less than one per cent from belligerents. In addition, he said, American farmers could produce larger quantities of food if necessary.

"There are more than 40,000 food manufacturers in the United States, with competition among them intense," he added. "No manufacturer who prices his products too high can stand up against such competition for the purchases of millions of thrifty housewives.

"Food manufacturers in general are against speculation and profiteering."

For reasons of sound policy, he said, many manufacturers have in recent weeks limited amounts sold to customers, to prevent speculation in foods.

Cotton Advances, July Delivery Actively Bought

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—In a trade dominated by continued tightness in the October position and active buying of July, cotton futures advanced 3 to 10 points today.

Purchase of close to 20,000 bales of July jolted the ring considerably. The deal was said to be covering by mills against forward sales of cotton goods for which the raw material had not been contracted.

Hedging sales tapered off. Selling generally in fact, was checked in by the belief heavy Eastern rains might impede movement of the new crop to market.

Heavy Trading but Irregular Prices Characterize Stock Exchange Market; Rails Start Off Briskly but Drop at Close

New York, Sept. 27.—Heavy trading, but irregular prices, characterized the market on the stock exchange today. The result of the heavy firing from the bullish and bearish forces was that no salients were captured and the situation in Wall Street was left virtually at the same position occupied the previous day. Utilities were given a good run up in the morning, but their gains did not hold too well. Rails started where they left off Tuesday night, but here again the advances were greatly reduced before the close.

The composite average of the market showed a negligible gain of 0.03 point. Steels and metals gave ground but the gains retained by the better grade rails and some support for the motors proved sufficient to give the list a slightly higher average. Trading was large; amounting to 2,339,930 shares and several times during the day the ticker was late.

Issues Reach New Highs

The run-up during the morning carried 98 individual issues to new highs for the year. New York Central was again the most active security on the list and it held about unchanged. Rails were still in the forefront, the three most active issues belonging in this category, the other two being Canadian Pacific and Pennsylvania. Columbia Gas led the utilities but was little changed in price, but North American jumped a point. Stone & Webster attracted some attention, apparently on the assumption that there will be increased public utility building programs next year.

Equipment shares were not neglected and before they were knocked down by profit taking, new highs for the year had been scored by American Car & Foundry, Baldwin, Pullman and two of the pressed steel car issues, while Poor & Co. equaled its former top.

The early gain in the utilities and the rails was sufficient to carry the wartime market to a new high for the year, but while the composite average of one hundred representative stocks touched a new maximum, it should be noted that most groups which go to make up the composite still held below their recent tops, reached since the start of the war boom.

Utilities Below Average

Only four groups went into new high territory for the current move, namely the utilities, equipments, better grade rails and lower grade rails. In the case of the utilities, the high today was still somewhat under the year's best average, made in August.

There appeared to be a great deal of churning in the market at levels slightly above and slightly below the previous top reached in the first surge of the war boom on September 13. Dow theorists are watching very closely the present action of the industrials in holding below the September 13 highs, while the rails have moved ahead steadily. Penetration of this previous top by the industrials would confirm the action of the rails and reaffirm that all trends are still upward. On the other hand, if the industrials resist and both industrials and rails penetrate the lows of September 18, it will be constructed as a reversal in the secondary trend from upward to downard. Secondary reactions are expected to erase one-third to two-thirds from the preceding upswing.

Power Production High

Midweek statistical information held to the favorable side. A new high for all time was set in power production for the week ended September 23. The total was up 0.3 per cent over the previous week and 13.7 per cent over the corresponding week of last year. Equipment purchases by the railroads, and consequent buying of steel by the fabricators, kept the tone cheerful in the steel industry. Zinc prices were advanced again, this time to 6½ cents a pound. The Merchants Association of New York reported that in nearly all the business activities in New York on which monthly data are collected, there were substantial gains in August as compared with the like month a year ago. Building construction showed the greatest gain.

Gold Stocks Down

Not all groups of stocks have been benefiting from the war boom. The most notable exception is the gold stocks, all of which are selling near their poorest prices of the year. A break of 4 points in Homestake today carried it to a new low for the year and Dome lost 1¼. On the upside, Norfolk & Western still held the honors for major progress, adding another 4½ points. Westinghouse advanced 1¼. Losses of 1 to 2 points were sustained by Bethlehem, United States Steel, Smelting, Union Carbide and DuPont.

Leading commodities were as erratic as securities. Wheat edged higher by a small fraction in early dealings but then lost about a cent, only to rally again on reports of dryness and depletion of soil moisture. The close was off ⅝ to 1 cent a bushel. Cotton had a better tone but business was transacted at only a moderate volume. The close was up 3 to 10 points.

Red Cross To Survey War Relief

Delegation Sails Monday to Visit Belligerent Capitals

A delegation from the American Red Cross will sail for Europe Monday on a neutral ship to investigate war relief problems, especially the problem of relief for Polish refugees, it was announced yesterday by Red Cross Chairman Norman H. Davis.

In the delegation will be Ernest J. Swift, of Santa Cruz, Calif., vice chairman of the Red Cross, in charge of foreign operations; Wayne C. Taylor, of Chicago, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and James T. Nicholson, of Worcester, Mass., director of the American Junior Red Cross.

They will visit the capitals of belligerent nations, following preliminary conferences in Geneva with the International Red Cross Committee. Passage to Europe will be made aboard the Dutch liner Nieuw Amsterdam.

Polish Need Greatest

Davis said that greatest distress at this time is in Poland and the neighboring countries that harbor Polish refugees. The delegation's report will put the American Red Cross in a better position to plan and execute the assistance it will be able to render in Europe, Davis commented.

"Experience in the last war has shown that there was considerable confusion and duplication of effort in administering American relief in Europe. We want to avoid this time, if possible, a repetition of such mistakes," Davis said.

The extent and character of American Red Cross relief activities in Europe would largely depend upon the reports from the delegation and the support of the American people in meeting the needs as they arise. Requests already have come from Red Cross societies in Poland, Great Britain and France for certain hospital and medical supplies, he made known.

Supplies Being Assembled

Supplies, produced by chapters throughout this country, are now being assembled for early shipment, he said. The American Red Cross has been called upon to meet many emergency needs from its own resources since the outbreak of the war. Among these were aid for the Athenia victims, the starting of chapter production of surgical dressings and garments for refugees, and the establishment of a system of communications for Americans seeking news of relatives abroad. Work on behalf of prisoners of war soon will begin, he said.

"Unfortunately, however, the suffering in Europe and the consequent demands upon us for assistance will increase as the war is prolonged. When the time comes to ask the American people for funds to continue this work and to meet the increasing needs, I am confident we will obtain a generous response," Davis stated.

He commented on the wide background of Red Cross experience the delegation members have.

U. S. Will Join Pan-American Fiscal Parley

Hanes Likely to Be Our Representative At Guatemala Talks

The Government has accepted an invitation to participate in a conference between the treasuries of American republics at Guatemala City early in November, it was learned yesterday. Undersecretary John W. Hanes has been mentioned as the possible representative of this country.

The meeting is in fulfillment of a resolution passed at the Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru, last December.

The conference will offer opportunities for working out closer trade ties with Latin American countries. This subect is now under discussion at the inter-American neutrality conference at Panama City.

Noble Sees Officials

Meanwhile, the Administration made plans at home for attacking on two fronts the problem of expanding trade with Latin America.

Representatives of the Commerce Department Business Advisory Council, and banking officials, met with Acting Secretary of Commerce Noble and department economists to talk over means for laying a permanent foundation of trade expansion with this country's Southern neighbors.

The State Department, moreover, pressed forward with efforts to negotiate trade agreements with Latin American governments.

Building for Peace

This is part of a general program for reconstruction of world trade at the conclusion of the war. The end of the World War, it is recalled, found a condition of world-wide trade disruption. A network of trade agreements, some State Department officials believe, will provide a basis for resumption of trade relationships on a liberal basis when the war is over.

Aside from a projected pact with Argentina, negotiations are anticipated for agreements with Uruguay and Chile. A treaty with Venezuela is said to be near conclusion. Agreements with Bolivia, Paraguay, and possibly Peru, are being studied.

Monetary and banking problems, and perhaps the question of loans and related matters, will be discussed at the Guatemala City meeting. Consideration will be given to regular meetings thereafter, to be held at least once a year.

Superintendents of the respective departments are H. V. Herold, J. Richard Wingfield, Linton Smith, Charles Carr, C. M. Garnett, Mrs. Robert Garrison, Mrs. O. R. Allen, Mrs. M. R. Carter, Mrs. Nelson Mahone and Mrs. H. V. Herold.

Amusement features include a softball game between fathers and sons, a tobacco spitting contest, catch the greasy pig, horseshoe tournament and basketball games.

Ninth Straight Loss For St. Louis; Fox, Gehringer Hit Homers

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 27.—The St. Louis Browns took their ninth straight on the chin today as the Detroit Tigers mopped up a three-game series with a 7-to-4 victory for Buck Newsom.

A home run by Pete Fox in the fifth and another by Charley Gehringer with one on in the eighth clinched the decision, the nineteenth of the year for Newsom, although he bowed to a pinch hitter when the bases were loaded in the seventh. Bill Cox, recalled from San Antonio, was charged with the loss.

Each team got only seven hits, but together the seven pitchers who saw action served up a total of 16 bases on balls.

Competition Hot During Central's 2d Grid Reign

The Taussig boys, of course, top the list. Bryan Morse rates close under them. Then come such athletes as J. H. Small, Emory Radford, and Dorsey Griffith, all of the class of '08; Creed Fulton, Buck Austin and Ted Howard, of '06, and Frank Hodgson, of '04.

After its sizzling start in the football series, Eastern fell off and its only other victory before 1937 was, as said before, in 1897. It was in celebration of Emory Wilson's shift to Central as well as of the official christening of the new East Capitol street school.

First Cage Title in 1911

One name, however, which old-time Easterners speak reverently is that of Jack Fields, the backfield ace who later played at Yale, earned All-America selection by Walter Camp, and returned to New Haven as coach.

Eastern's first basketball title wasn't taken until 1911, and its first baseball crown not until two years later with the immortal "Catsey" Dean as the sparkplug. The baseball record can hardly be excused, there having been a series in the diamond game almost as long as in football. However, basketball came later in the scheme of schoolboy athletics simply because it wasn't until 1891 that "Doc" Naismith first hung up his peach crate and told his kids to shoot at it.

Getting back to football, and the sudden and unexpected end of Tech's ruthless sovereignty in 1910, it was a newcomer to Central who finally turned the trick. John Thomas, an all-American at Lafayette, in his first year of coaching set down the Blacksmiths, as Techmen were dubbed, and took a 6-0 victory.

Help, of course, was lent Coach Thomas by a quartet of youngsters who could do 100 yards in 11 seconds any day of the week—and with football armor on. Fritz Reuter probably was the star, his 40-yard dash at any rate setting up the score that beat Tech. George Van Dyne, who scampered the final 5 yards, was no better than Sylvan King and George Hamilton. Another factor in Thomas' favor was the 0-0 tie to which Tech had been treated earlier by Eastern.

For the next two years Tech and Eastern did everything but dynamite in an effort to pry Central loose from the title. But with the same four stars the Mount Pleasanters were troubled not at all. Tech managed for a 0-0 tie in 1911, but in the playoff it was routed by a 12-0 margin.

With Reuter, King, Hamilton and Van Dyne finally starting to move out through graduation in 1913, Central's grid machine was less than a shadow of its former self. It started the season with a 3-0 loss to Tech, whose Little Jakey Roberts dropkicked a field goal from the 25-yard line for the only score and bfeore it was done Central had lost to Western and Business, it's only victory coming at the windup of the season when it edged Eastern out of a chance for the title with a 3-0 setback.

Main Cog in Machine

"Untz" Brewer was the main cog in Western's machine that year, and Business boasted the services of the three Wise brothers, Roy, Ralph and Buck, their cousin, Big Joe Wise, and an all-around athlete named Harry Harris.

While Central was being shoved hither and yon, Tech went unconcernedly about winning back its title. It flatteed Western, 12-7, and closed out the season with a 7-0 decision over Eastern. Instead of four stars in its lineup, McKinley was mainly proud of one player, a husky lad by the name of Gene Ochsenreiter. He scored the touchdown that beat Eastern in the crucial game. He kept Tech on top of the interhigh heap until 1916. And he happened to have the lad who developed into the city's greatest football coach as his understudy.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 27.—Despite hesitancy caused by approach of the budget message, which came after the close, the stock market displayed firm tendencies today. Rails and many selected domestic stocks were well supported. American shares held firm and British government bonds found a freer market. Foreign loans, however, were wobbly. Kaffirs slipped back in anticipation of further continental selling.

Paris—Bourse prices fluctuated unevenly in listless trade today. International stocks shifted irregularly and most domestic issues took a rapped course. Rentes closed unchanged to 30 centimes lower.

Amsterdam—Late bourse prices came back a little in some divisions today, but the closing list was well mixed.

Liverpool—Support for cotton futures was limited to local interests today and the market ended 5 to 9 points lower. Hedging and straddle selling were main depressants.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Freak hands are at once the most dangerous and the most delightful that spring from the prolific contract bridge deck. They awake visions in the holder of the great potentialities of the hand provided partner can support, and tempt him to reckless overbidding—reckless, because usually it is the adversaries, not partner, who hold the balance of the suits. So from visions of great victories even greater defeats are often suffered.

H. C. submits a hand which was bid four different ways and not once to the maximum contract of seven hearts, although the Blackwood convention was used throughout. Here are the cards:

North
♡ A K J 5 4
◇ A 7 3
♣ Q

South
♠ A K J 4
◇ None
♣ A 9 7 5 2

The bidding at Table 1, with North dealer:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

H. C. asks, "Was North's four-spade bid a strength response?" Yes, South should have continued and perhaps the grand slam would have been reached. Culbertson advises against making a jump raise, preferring to keep the bidding low, even with ample support. It would not greatly affect the bidding in this case, however.

Bidding at Table 2:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

The cogs probably jammed here, because South did not show his spade suit. This could have been done over North's rebid of three hearts.

Bidding at Table 3:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Sheer timidity by South.

Bidding at Table 4:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 NT	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 NT	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

North failed here, neglecting to raise spades.

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	7 ♡	Pass
Pass or 7 ♠

Seasoned Timber

By Dorothy Canfield

Timothy Coulton Hulme is the central character in this story of a man and a town. And around him are some of the most enjoyable characters in recent fiction, beginning with queer old Aunt Lavina, the garrulous Mrs. Washburn, and Eli Kemp, youthful inventor. Timothy is principal of the academy in the small town of Clifford, Vt., where the story opens on an afternoon in September. After a day of routine tasks, Timothy, as usual, takes Aunt Lavinia to supper at Miss Peck's. There he hears of the new third grade teacher who is going to wait table for her board at Miss Peck's. On the way out Johnny Lane stops Timothy to ask that his sister be given the domestic science position at the academy.

BUT OF COURSE taking a new teacher into one's faculty is not to be dispatched with any such raw lack of ceremony. There were certain stylized professional rites to be accomplished—the interview in his office, the presentation of her references, the formal consultation by telephone of the only resident trustee who said as he usually did, "Oh, I don't know anything about it, T. C. Go ahead," the inspection of the domestic science room, the pointing out from her rich-industrial-Massachusetts experience of many lacks in its equipment, the answer from his poor-agricultural-Vermont side that these lacks were likely always to exist; his first mention of his key-idea that academy cooking courses should demonstrate the possibility of eating better—of eating very well, indeed—by skillful preparation of food that anybody in Clifford could have; his announcement—at last—of the small salary paid—her decent pause for pretending consideration, although she must have known to a penny what it was, the conclusion of the bargain, the chat afterward about the refinishing of antique furniture, and the health of some common friends they had in Ashley—casual subjects not connected with classrooms or salaries, a self-respecting reminder to the universe that this was more than a mere buying-and-selling of commodities.

BY THE TIME the augurs had completed the prescribed ceremonial to the last swing of their togas, it was late, and the neglected work on Mr. Hulme's desk cried aloud. He called his mind to him, fitted on its everyday harness, and cracked his whip. Throwing its calloused shoulders into the collar, it tugged away at what there was to do, beginning with the familiar, short, and uncomplicated statement of resources—125 students at $90 tuition, $11,250; income from the $60,000 endowment which used to be steadily $3,000 now shrunk to $2,300 and still shrinking—total income, $13,550. The more or less fixed salaries were set down, tentatively—Principal (who was also professor of junior and senior English and history, and coach for tennis, swimming and skating) $2,100. Dryden, the stolid, the reliable, who taught manual training and agriculture, and also coached the football, basketball and baseball teams, $1,600. The new teacher for physics and chemistry who was, although he did not know it yet, also to be held responsible for all the odd jobs nobody else had time for—$1,000. Bowen, just out of Yale, evidently a clever ambitious fellow, would never stay on for that after he had acquired a year or so of the professional experience without which he could not get a position in a more prosperous school. Mr. Hulme's pencil hung in the air an instant as he considered Bowen. There was something about him—an aura, that was—perhaps it was no more than the normal to-be-expected cocksureness of the recent college graduate, outfitted with the latest thing in ideas. The uplifted pencil dropped to the paper again, and ran agilely ahead into the smaller salaries—French and Latin, $900, domestic science—account-keeping and typewriting—poor old Miss Benson—the janitor—the piano tuner (one tuning, $2.50).

SO MUCH was fairly constant, although the salaries could still be cut—well, could they be? They might have to be. Certainly there was shockingly little left for insurance, coal, electricity, telephone, water and office supplies. And as for problematical items like reference books, footballs and basketballs, window-panes, soap, and so on—they could just be prayed for. There might be less breakage and repairs than usual—was there ever? At any rate, there was not a penny left in his estimated budget for them.

He worked till midnight, when his mind dropped in its tracks, and he hung up his whip and went to bed, too tired to go through his usual futile spasm of wondering what could be done about the worn-out old English teacher and the elderly janitor, both declining into diminishing usefulness, with no prospect of even the smallest pension. As he undressed mechanically, his mind was darkened with its usual foreboding conviction that this year the academy budget simply could not be balanced. Yet something with much more vitality than his mind assured him that it could, because it must. His mind, always jealous of mere vitality, soured this assurance by suggesting that it was no more than a hope that old Mr. Wheaton, the one rich trustee, might, after having made himself sufficiently disagreeable, cover the deficit with a check.

As usual Timothy Hulme recoiled violently from this idea—the man of wealth coming all too vividly to mind, with the ungenerous insensitive clutch on his own possessions which he called conservatism, with the grotesque patronage toward an innate distinction of character beyond his understanding which he called "protecting Vermont traditions." But Timothy was too tired to lie awake cursing all over again the day that Clifford voters had made Mr. Wheaton a trustee. As often happened, just before he went to sleep, his memory drew out from the music of the last few days, unheeded at the time, a random phrase and began to sing it in his ear; this time it was the graceful, deliciously incongruous setting of a theological doctrine—"un-i-gen-i-tum," the alto sang the phrase gaily, and "un-i-gen-i-tum" agreed the soprano with a light heart. It sounded as though his young mother with her sister, Lavinia, were singing it downstairs in the drawing room. He turned over in his bed, drew a long breath, put both arms over his head as he had in his boyhood and was asleep.

TWO DAYS later with a yell of "Academy! Academy! One! Two! Three!" echoing up to the spruces and hemlocks on the mountain for the first time since June, the academy opened for its 117th year.

Through the old stone building which for two dreamy months had been filled with nothing more tangible than red and gold reflections from the sunsets in The Gap, there surged a roar of adolescent youth. Incredible that only 85 boys and 40 girls could send up such a column of noise.

And all through Clifford, from the white houses in the Street down to the few business buildings and the three factories at Clifford Depot, men and women caught echoes of that mounting uproar if not with the physical nerves of hearing, at least with the ear of memory or anticipation. People paused in whatever they were doing, when down the hill came the slow, brazen clinging-clang, cling-clang of the primary school bell, and the bugle call, which for some reason now forgotten, had always been the signal to academy students that they had four minutes left in which to get to their seats in assembly. Standing still for an instant, with mops or dustcloths or fountain pens or hammers or screwdrivers in their hands, Clifford grown-ups listened respectfully, affectionately, resentfully, reminiscently, wistfully, bitterly—according to the youth that lay back of them—to the two signals that education was once more under way. Mothers had foolish, life-giving thoughts about the son or daughter, unprotected and alone in the indifferent great world of the first grade or the freshman class. Fathers hoped, not very confidently, that all this book-learning would somehow get the children more satisfactions in life than their parents had ever found. Life-ignorant young employes, holding down their first jobs in offices and stores, felt half proudly, half wistfully, how far behind them lay the innocence of their school and academy days. Old Mr. Dewey threw out the lever which worked the great saw in his mill and stood to listen, thinking of the aspirations for the young which he never put into words, his weather-beaten deeply lined face glowing in the reflection from an inner flame. Miss Peck thought with silent bitterness of the miseries of her girlhood, unrelieved by any of the empty dead things she had docilely learned out of books, reached for her Shakespeare, found a certain page in The Tempest, and went out to put up (inscrutably to others) on her bulletin board, "The dark backward and abysm of time." Mrs. Washburn, looking in the glass at her withered cheeks and faded eyes, thought sadly how pretty she had been when at the call of that bugle she had hurried up the hill on light feet, hoping that Clayton Cadoret would sit near her for assembly. Little children, almost old enough to break through the protecting, hampering sheath of home, heard the bell and the bugle and lost interest for a moment in their doll-babies and popguns, thrilled, eager, afraid of the unknown, eager to be out in it, like Devon boys listening from doorways to Drake recruiting men for his ships. Gray-haired, disillusioned Polish and French-Canadian workmen in the woolen mills and chair factory down at Clifford Depot renewed their resentment against the American pretense that all young people have the same opportunities for success because they have the same opportunities in school, although everybody knows that in the modern world nobody can succeed who has not also money and influence. The three bumpkins from District School No. 10, now freshmen, heard the bugle with death in their backroad, country hearts and, doggedly putting one foot before the other, left the safety of Dewey House and went up Academy Hill as though it were Mort Homme, conquering their agony of shyness with an effort of the will so violent that nothing from that time on would seem unconquerable—not even the modern world, from which they were later to wring success, although with neither money nor influence.

UP AT THE academy Mr. Hulme, with the skill of experience, was holding a straight course through the hurly-burly of the first day; but experienced as he was, he looked somewhat wild-eyed and felt somewhat breathless with attending to all the points of the compass at once. How it was possible for a mere hundred and twenty-five students and their parents to make as much noise as a regiment of soldiers gone mad, he asked himself, and remembered that of course every one of these big children was the exact center of the universe. It was to be expected that the clashing of those universes crowded together in a school would make a terrific clatter—"whose other name is perhaps education," thought Mr. Hulme in his moments of hope, arranging the hydra-headed items of the programs of classes, holding down temperamental teachers still vacation-drunk, and holding up Melville Griffith, the old janitor who had as life-motto that when all was done that man could do, all was done in vain. "I'm sure there's a misunderstanding about Roger, Miss Benson. I'll have a talk with him—perhaps he'd better be transferred to one of my sections." "The word's carton, Pete, not cartoon." "I regret to say, Mrs. Thomas, that not a scholarship is left. We only have three to offer, you know." "I'll see." "Oh, yes, you can too, Melville. Take out those screws at the top and you'll see how easy it will be to lower it." "Sorry, it's much too expensive for us to consider." "That rule for vaccination is not ours—it is a State regulation." "Why, it would be quite impossible, Mr. Bowen, to arrange the physics laboratory work so that boys and girls aren't in the same period. And why in the world should we?" "Oh, yes, you can too, Melville! Lay down boards to run the wheelbarrow on." "I beg to differ with you, Mr. Henderson. In my opinion the atmosphere of Dewey House will be exactly what your daughter needs." "Sarcastic, Emmy, not sourcastic."

A teacher is always obliged to steer his own bark through a densely packed mass of other people's lives grinding together around him like floe in a crowded ice-field. At the beginning of each year when there were many perents to be seen, Timothy Hulme was all but crushed by the impact on him of the innumerable disasters, triumphs, hopes, hardships, successes, despairs, problems he was expected on a moment's notice to share, alleviate, solve. He envied tnd pitied people not teachers who had only their lives to live. He turned incessantly at top speed from parents, satisfied and dissatisfied to teachers, to students, to booksellers, to plumbers, to salesmen—making important decisions based on nothing better than snap-judgments, guessing at what he needed to know, making mistakes and brazenly acting on them, leaping to half-baked conclusions and sticking to them because a conclusion of some sort was at that moment needed more than wisdom. During the first two weeks of the academy year Mr. Hulme was not a man with insoluble problems of his own but an administrator, the picket-fence of detail standing between him and the dark formless abyss of personal life.

And he was a teacher; stepping frequently into feeble old Miss Benson's English classes to quell, by the practiced harshness of his drillmaster's bark, the incipient deviltry of freshmen sensing her weakness; putting his head through the door of Miss Lane's domestic science room for the one glance that showed him there was no need for his supervision in the well-ordered confusion of active girls perfectly in hand; coping lightly and easily with his own students and with an occasional nervous parent, because of the experience back of him; remembering to encourage, by admiring the chairs and tables and benches being made in the manual training room, that use of Clifford raw material for the enrichment of Clifford life on which he harped till he knew the teachers were sick of the sound of his voice; taking off his coat to show the citified new physics teacher, scornful of the rustic poverty around him and appalled to disgust by the meagerness of the laboratory, how to pick up the necessary straw for educational brick-making from the byways and roadsides and attics and garage [illegible] as an educator he had really learned his trade, T. C. had.

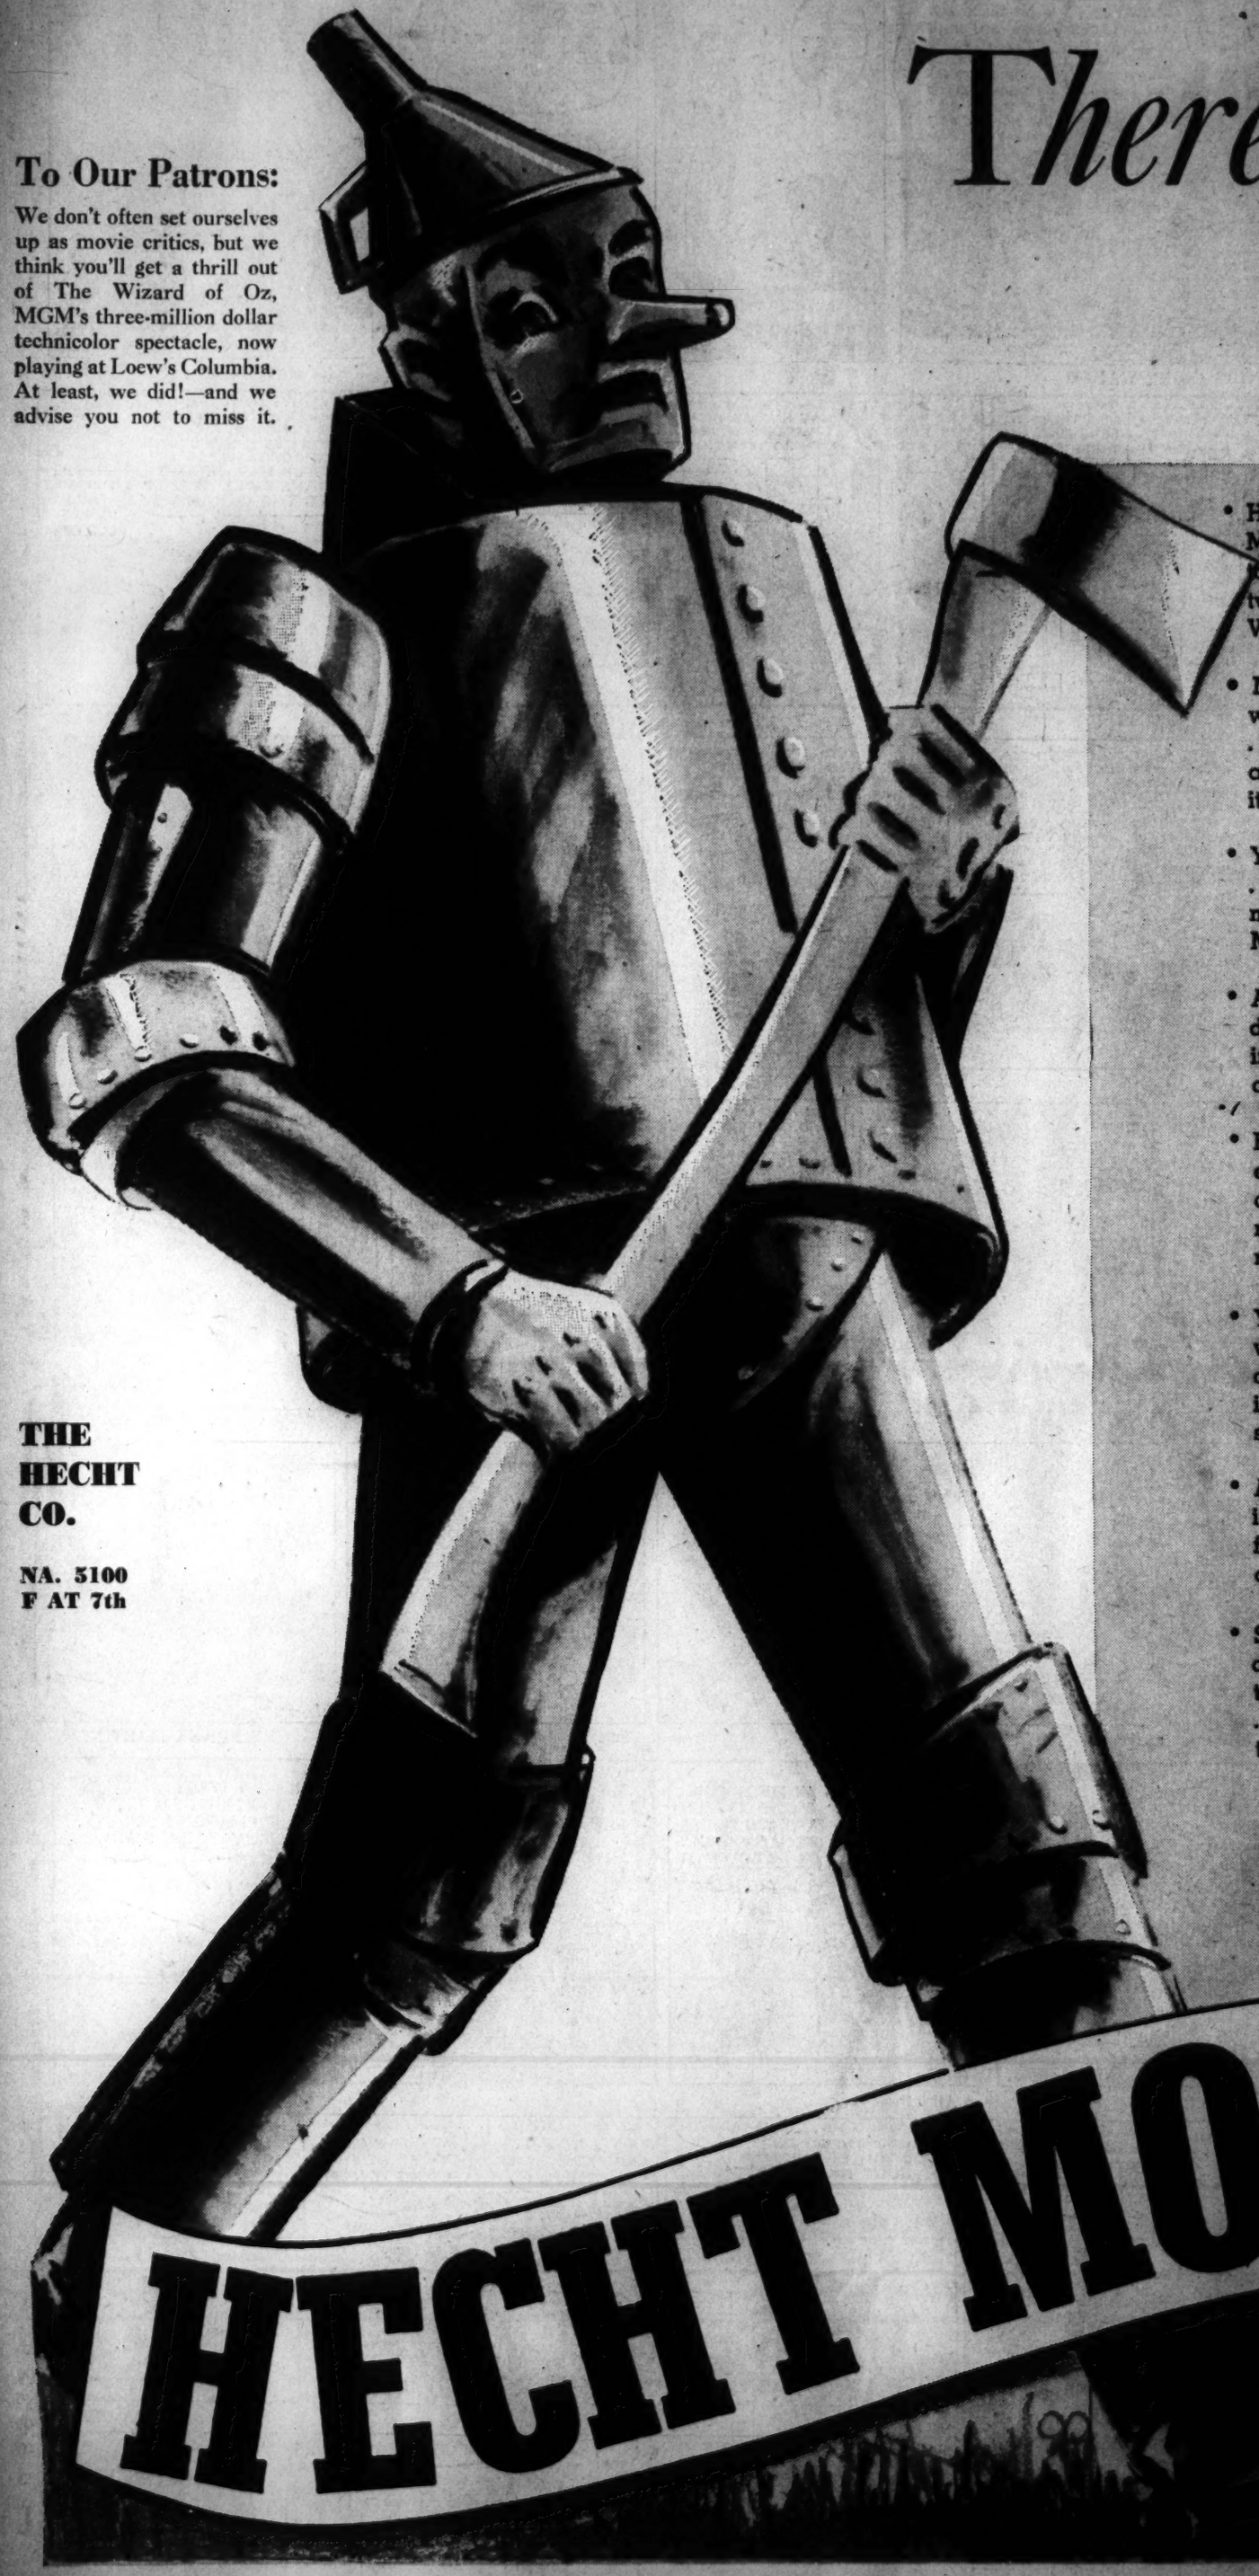
There's Magic in the Air!

To Our Patrons:

We don't often set ourselves up as movie critics, but we think you'll get a thrill out of The Wizard of Oz, MGM's three-million dollar technicolor spectacle, now playing at Loew's Columbia. At least, we did!—and we advise you not to miss it.



- Hold on there, Mr. Tin Woodman! Can't you feel the Magic in the air? Ever since you brought the Land of Oz to Washington we've been practicing up a Miracle or two ourselves . . . and we're all set to teach the old Wizard a little lesson!

- No . . . we can't put a brain in the Scarecrow . . . and we can't whisk Dorothy out of Oz and back to Kansas . . . but we stoutly insist that we can take a Dollar Bill and stretch it to cover a lot more than you ever thought it could.

- Your friend, the Wizard, would probably call that Magic . . . but we just call it Hecht Month . . . and we've had so much practice in stretching dollars during all the Hecht Months of the past that we've got the job down pat.

- And that Yellow-Brick-Road they sing about! Follow it down to F St. at Seventh, and see if it doesn't lead right into The Hecht Co. . . . and it's paved with values and with Savings . . . for the young-in-heart of all ages.

- Hecht Month has often been called a Miracle of Modern Merchandising . . . because its planning and preparation require so much in the way of time, effort and money, that few stores ever attempt an event on so magnificent a scale.

- You'll find shopping irresistible in Hecht Month . . . with a store full of current, fashionable, quality merchandise for everyone in the family and every need in the home . . . at the greatest store-wide savings of the season.
